Spray for Moths Needed Now

The third application of spray for codling moth should be made right away, states Geo. A. Nelson, county agent, as word has just been received from B. G. Thompson, associate entomologist, of the flight of the codling moth and that the eggs are being laid and will probably hatch under Willamette valley conditions about August 1.

Lead arsenate at the rate of three pounds per 100 gallons of water is recommended by Mr. Thompson. Where codling moth is not too serious, two pounds of arsenate of lead can be used. Calcium arsenate at the rate of three pounds per 100 gallons of water can also be used.

Sawdust Mulch Okeh If Nitrogen Ample

Sawdust as a mulch may be used around perennial plants safely whether fresh or old and regardless of kind, but if worked into the soil it will rob crops of available nitrogen until thoroughly decomposed.

Such is a preliminary report on sawdust mulching made to the Oregon Association of Nurserymen, members of which spent two days on the Oregon State college campus in June visiting scores of experimental projects related to the industry.

Fresh fir and fresh alder sawdust has been used in mulching trials started three years ago and which will be continued to determine results year after year. Alder sawdust decomposed much faster than fir, but even it depleted soil nitrogen when turned under.

Addition of large mounts of nitrogen fertilizer when sawdust is worked into the soil has overcome the depletion effect. Just how much fertilizer is required under varying conditions and how long it will be needed is now being studied.

Other effects on the soil have all been favorable. Physical condition and water holding capacity were improved by the added organic matter. Some plants, including roses, appear to be especially benefited.

Reclaiming Stained Clothing Explained

Summer garments that hang unworn in the closet because of underarm perspiration stains can sometimes be reclaimed. These stains will often come out with ordinary washing or dry cleaning, but a little elementary chemistry first will sometimes help restore color.

Body perspiration is usually acid, so counteract fresh stains with an alkali. Dampen the spot with water and hold it for a few minutes over the fumes from a bottle of ammonia water. Or for cotton, linen and other materials that do not waterspot—dilute the ammonia water to half strength, apply a few drops directly to the stain, and rinse thoroughly. Ammonia water affects some dyes, so have white vinegar handy to stop the action of the alkali if the fabric begins to change color.

Old Stains Differ

Perspiration stains that have been allowed to "set" for a few days may become alkaline. So if the old stain fails to respond to the ammonia water treatment, reverse the process and use vinegar—a mild acid. Sponging with vinegar sometimes restores color, though an old stain is more difficult to remove than a fresh one.

Yellow perspiration stains on white material will sometimes vanish when bleached in the sun after washing with soap and water. For stubborn stains, sponge with hydrogen peroxide. Or quickly dip the stained spot into a solution of two teaspoons sodium hydrosulfite to one pint of water, and rinse immediately, but test the cloth for color-fastness to this bleach before using.

Perspiration odors sometimes can be removed from garments.

that are not yet ready for the laundry or dry cleaner. Sponge the spot with warm water to which a few drops of vinegar have been added. Sprinkle with powdered pepsin, working the pepsin into the cloth. Then let stand one or two hours, keeping the spot moist. Brush off the powder and rinse well.
