Green-Floeter Rites Read at Oswego

Donna Jean Green, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Adrian S. Logan, and Fred Floeter Jr., USNR, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Floeter, Wilark, were married Sunday afternoon, September 8 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Schulz, aunt and uncle of the bride, who reside near Oswego Lake.

A weeping willow tree surrounded by peach colored gladioli was the setting for the double ring ceremony read by Rev. Ethel Reamer. The wedding march was played by Tony Schulz and Miss Evelyn Reardon sang "Because" and "To Each His Own."

The bride wore a traditional white wedding gown with a train and fingertip veil which was the wedding gown and veil worn by her aunt, Mrs. Schulz. She carried a bouquet of white gladioli and red roses and was given in marriage by her father.

Mrs. Schulz, wearing a floor length sculptured gown carried an arm bouquet of coral gladioli and was matron of honor for her niece.

Miss Willette Floeter, sister of the groom, was a bridesmaid.

Walter Floeter, brother of the groom, was best man.

A garden reception was held following the wedding and Mr. and Mrs. Floeter left afterwards for San Francisco where the groom is stationed. They hope to be in San Francisco until March.

Seven grand officers were in Vernonia Tuesday evening at the I.O.O.F. meeting, two of them being local residents and the others coming here from other places in the state. Picture slides of Oddfellowship provided the principal interest of the evening.

Grand officers present included A. J. Lenon, Grand Master of the State of Oregon; Thomas McLeod, Grand Chief Patriarch; Earl Shank, Grand Secretary and Grand Scribe; Andy Neigiel, Grand Guardian; Warren Young, Grand Conductor; Cecil Johnson, District Deputy Grand Master and M. About 80 % To Get Reduction

About 80 per cent of Oregon's veterans taking on-the-job training under the G.I. bill will suffer at least some reduction in subsistence payments because of new limitations on combined earnings, Tom Craig, veterans administration representatives here, pointed out Wednesday.

The VA's regional office in Portland has informed Craig that a sampling of files for the state indicates that 1200 or more veterans are subject to removal from the subsistence rolls immediately.

These already are earning $175 a month if single or $200 if with dependents, even without counting in their government checks, hence are no longer eligible for subsistence under new amendments to the G.I. bill, Craig explained.

About 600 other veterans are expected to exceed the earnings ceilings within 90 days as they progress to a higher wage scale and an additional 1000 within six months. Altogether, about 7000 ex-servicemen and women are counted recently in on-the-job training. Four out of every five will take at least some reduction because the VA can pay in subsistence only the difference between actual earnings on the job and the $175 and $200 ceilings. being examined, however. The VA expects to survey on-the-job-training establishments to determine if courses meet standards set by the new law. Veterans will not be removed from training while their courses are being examined, however. Craig meets with veterans each Wednesday morning at the city hall in Vernonia.
