

Strong America Best Peace Hope

The new U.S. Army is maintained on the national belief that the best insurance of peace is an able force of men in a state of preparedness. Although the United States is more than willing to participate in the world disarmament, her armed forces must be preserved until that time when there is no longer the danger of either another Pearl Harbor attack or a disruption of our committed policies and duties in occupied territories overseas.

This was the announcement yesterday of Recruiting Headquarters, 6th Army, Presidio of San Francisco, which called upon the citizens of America to back up the preparedness program by according the professional soldier who is performing a necessary service for his government the stature and importance which is his due.

"A high percentage of the membership of our new regular army at present are high school and college graduates," the announcement pointed out. "The army needs many more of this type of men, to be trained and become career officers and non-commissioned officers. They now have adequate pay, security in employment and in retirement, but they lack the one thing, the all important thing, acceptance by our citizenry of their stature and importance which dignifies their profession to the point where they can announce to the world: 'I am a professional soldier and I am proud of it.'"
