Welfare Expenditures in June Total $29,803.81

Expenditures for the month of June in Columbia county on welfare were released earlier this week by Mrs. Eva L. Tice, administrator of the Columbia County Public Welfare commission as totaling $29,803.81. Mrs. Tice also released a statement of matters reviewed at the commission meeting for the month.

The report of expenditures was itemized as follows:

General Assistance, 118 cases, $5,-985.26. (Three applications on hand).

Old Age Assistance, 368 cases, $15,248.00 (Eight applications

Aid to Dependent Children, 73 cases, $6,745.00. (Seven applications on hand).

Aid to the Blind, 5 cases, $324.00. Administration, 7 cases $1,501.55. Total, $29,803.81.

In the statement released by the commission was pointed out the support given dependent children as well as the disposition made of several complaints regarding expenditures of funds where not justified. The statement follows:

"This month we have had two pleasant inquiries and several condemnatory criticisms regarding families supposedly on public funds who have no right to assistance. No one family identified was actually receiving assistance and most of them were not known to this organization.

"However, the complaints would not identify two families, so no determination could be made regarding them. In both cases the complaints were 'sure' of their 'facts', but would not identify so status could actually be determined.

"Such complaints have value in interpreting welfare standards, and may without violation of the law regarding the confidential nature of our records result in the complaint securing information that she needs to have to understand what becomes of the welfare dollar.

dollar.

"Rarely is a complaint or inquiry received regarding a family for whom a long-range plan has been made. Occasionally an approval is registered. Recently there have been several regarding children under care in foster homes supervised by this agency. Currently there are 30 Columbia county children in foster homes, one is partially self-supporting, another is fully supported by his father, although supervision is by this agency. At this time, four of these children persist in some unapproved attitude or activity, the others appear to be normal, happy children. For many of these there has been a drastic change from a deprived unfavorable situation. The expressed approval of neighbors and teachers is not uncom-

"Foster homes are certified on investigation. Warm, out-giving foster parents are the prime requisite—generally a child wants love in quantities—and it interests him not at all to have overstuffed and polished furniture. When a child needs a home one is picked for him from those homes already certified, or if no home is available, an effort is made to secure one. This agency is not an adoptive agency and the children who remain under supervision are not adoptable children."

Swim Manuals Available Now

Swimming and diving manuals are available here and can be obtained from Doug Culbertson, guard at the city park pool, he said Tuesday evening. The manuals, which sell for 60 cents each, are being provided by Herbert Eisenschmidt, water safety commissioner for Columbia county and director of the St. Helens swim pool.

Culbertson also announced that a two-way swimming meet between Vernonia and St. Helens is scheduled to take place about the middle of July at St. Helens. Swimmers from there will come here later in the year for a return meet. Events will consist of relays, breast, back and free style strokes. Several time marks have been set by Vernonia swimmers at the annual county swimming meet which is also scheduled to take place again this year at a later date.

During good weather the average number of youngsters taking swim lessons at the park pool has been 15, the guard said.

Fall from Car Injures Girl

It is thought that the car wheel ran across her legs, one of the upper leg bones being broken. The child was treated here and taken to Providence hospital, Portland, where she will be for probably three weeks.

Fire Warning Sounded by KOG Chairman

Extra Care Over Holiday Period Asked in Forests

The practice of extreme care with fire in forest areas was urged earlier this week for the coming long week end when many people will take advantage of the opportunity to enjoy a short vacation over the 4th. The warning was issued by Glen Hawkins, county chairman of Keep Oregon Green. He pointed out that people can camp now without first obtaining a permit, as a general forest area closure has not been declared, but that extreme care should be exercised in picking the camp site and in the use of fire.

Forest fires can start at this time even though there have been recent rains in this locality. For the state as a whole, the past-two months of dryness has turned forests into a tinder box and a carelessly started fire could cause another Tillamook burn from a forest fire standpoint, the extremely dry weather having created a situation identical with 1933 when 350,000 acres went up in smoke in the Tillamook burn.

In this vicinity a very enviable record has been maintained on the Columbia Tree Farm where no calls to supress fires have been received so far this season. The Pittsburg guard station, however, has been called into action, mostly beyond the St. Helens mountain.

The KOG chairman pointed out that five large signs reminding people of the need for care have been posted in this part of the Nehalem valley along with other smaller signs. The large posters, which are mounted in a substantial wood frame of rustic construction, have proven so popular that three-of them have also been made by Columbia Farm workmen for use on the Clatsop Tree farm with headquarters at Seaside.

Six precautions have been listed for Oregonians who take to the woods this week end. They are:

1. Never leave a camp fire burning. Use plenty of water to drown it out.

2. Never smoke when walking or traveling through forest land.

3. Never throw a lighted cigarette, matches or burning material from cars.

4. Always use an ash tray.

5. Never light fire crackers in the woods.

6. Be sure cigarette or pipe ashes are ground out in mineral soil.

Building Painted

The exterior of the building owned by West Oregon Electric Cooperative was being painted earlier this week by Ed Hartzell, employee of the Cooperative.
