Thursday evening's program of dedication for the new high school building will be quite an occasion for this vicinity. The program will dedicate to the community a building that can be pointed to with pride as an asset to this region. Because of the new building and the features it contains, the requirements for modern education have been met through the cooperation of people in the district who gave their approval, which in turn, made it possible for the district board to carry the modernization program to completion.

Again this year, as was the situation last year, business men were in disagreement or undecided upon the question of observing Armistice day by closing their doors for the day. The problem was a topic of discussion Monday evening at the Lions club meeting.

From that discussion a proposal developed that may lead to a definite decision on the problem of which holidays should be observed and which should not. The proposal was that six holidays during the year be considered worthy of observance to the extent that business houses close their doors.

The days suggested were: New Year's day, Memorial day, July 4, Labor day, Thanksgiving and Christmas. These six days are observed by union agreement. To carry the problem to something of a conclusion, it is likely that a canvass of business places will be made within the next few days to determine the opinions on the question of observing these special days.

Many other business centers have discontinued the observance of Armistice day, probably because of the fact that other wars have been fought and decided since Armistice day was first established. The importance of this day has changed since that time and consequently its observance is changing also.
