July is independence month — and this year it's brand re-recording time in Oregon for thousands of livestock owners. To retain their present brands, owners must renew their applications every five years.

How to get this job done fast and without headaches at both ends of the line has been a perennial problem at the State Department of Agriculture.

This time the department has hit upon a streamlined idea that it thinks will do the job. You see it above. It's a ready-made application blank. All the stockman needs to do is to sign his name, draw in the earmarks used and return the form along with the recording fee.

The form above will go to all stockmen of record already filled out as you see it. This particular application covers cattle; similar ones cover horses, sheep, swine and poultry. It's taken a crew at department headquarters in Salem months to get the brand applications ready for mailing.

The first 2000 applications will go in the mail July 1, and 2000 more daily until mid-July. After that—well, the department's animal division hopes this will bring in the brands!

4th which was attended by about a dozen family groups.

to keep up with the growing Pacific Northwest

WE NEED 7-LEAGUE BOOTS

It takes giant strides to keep pace with the growth and development taking place in our wonderful Pacific Northwest. The area for which we are privileged to provide telephone service has more than doubled its population in the past ten years, and it is still growing.

More people mean larger payrolls, additional business and increased opportunities for all of us. More people bring increased responsibilities as well, to industries like ours with a public service to perform. To improve our facilities and to make more telephones available for more people, we have spent 21 million dollars since January 1, 1946. This year, 1954, we have budgeted an additional $6,300,000 for more construction. As our population continues to grow, we will continue to enlarge our facilities.

We believe in our Pacific Northwest, and in the great future in store for the people who live here. That is why we invest millions of dollars to continue our expansion program and to provide for everyone in our area telephone service as fine as is available anywhere in the nation.
