AROUND THE FARM

BY DON COIN WALROD
County Extension Agent

Forest seedlings will be available from the state nursery about November 1, but the great demand for trees has made it necessary for a definite limit to be placed upon the number of trees of each species that any one individual may purchase.

Consequently, we would like to call this point to the attention of forest farmers. We have available a few mimeograph copies of what is to be a brand new bulletin entitled "Raising Forest Tree Seedlings at Home." This is the first circular of its kind that has come to our attention.

At the start of this circular there is a section that deals with the advantages and disadvantages of such enterprise called "Should I Grow My Own." We feel that it will worth quoting.

"Growing seedlings in a home nursery is something like growing garden plants for transplanting. With a 3' by 10' seedbed you can grow 2,000 Douglas fir seedlings to one year size or about 1,500 seedlings to two year size. It is not likely that you can raise seedlings cheaper than you can buy them. Your seedlings will probably be cheaper if bought from a state-federal nursery and then, too, it takes two years to grow your own.

"Raising coniferous trees from seed is an exacting job that is not recommended for the amateur. It requires special knowledge, and is greatly assisted by special equipment beyond reach of the small home nursery. The little fellow can be successful however, if he follows certain procedures as explained in this leaflet.

"Growing seedlings at home offers a way to obtain seedlings in times when planting stock is scarce, as it is now. By growing your own seedlings, you may raise species not commonly offered for sale. Also, you can use your home-grown trees for any purpose desired, whereas state laws in general forbid the use of state-federal nursery seedlings for anything but reforestation, Christmas trees, windbreak and other conservation purposes. State-federal seedlings cannot be planted within incorporated limits, nor can they be resold with roots attached."

These circulars are well written and contain information that is quite complete. We have only a very few copies. It will be first come, first served, but we probably can run off additional copies should the demand justify it.

Numerous folks have been in for application forms for the registration of wells claiming a right to appropriate ground water. This matter is serious, as the law allowed three years after passage for the filing of these registrations. More than two years have passed, and now we understand that the state engineer estimates that considerably less than half the wells eligible for registration have been registered up to this time.

Failure for any person to register his well prior to August 3, 1958 will be interpreted as abandonment for all claims to right of appropriating such water by reason of use prior to August 3, 1955.

It is important to note, however, that certain wells are exempt. "The new law does not apply to appropriation of ground water for stock watering purposes, for watering any lawn or noncommercial garden not exceeding one-half acre in area, for single or group domestic purpose in an amount not exceeding 15,000 gallons per day, or for single industrial or commercial purposes in an amount not exceeding 5,000 gallons per day. Registration statements for exempted uses cannot be accepted."

Instructions for filing applications will be provided with the application form.

Fees: When a registration statement is filed with this office, it must be accompanied by a $10.00 examination fee, plus a recording fee based upon the amount and type of water use.

Recording fees for irrigation are $5.00 for the first 30 acres or fraction thereof; 15 cents for each acre in excess of 100 and up to and including 1,000 acres; and one cent for each acre in excess of 1,000 acres.

Recording fees for any other purpose are $10.00 for the first second-foot or fraction thereof, and $2.00 for each additional second-foot.

Cattlemen To Attend Hearing

Columbia county cattlemen, both beef and dairy, are being urged to attend the hearing on a state beef commission to be held in Portland October 15.

Jess Lewis, president of the Columbia County Livestock association, indicates that the hearing scheduled for 1:30 p.m. in the state office building, Portland, is the first of a series of such hearings that will be conducted over the state. Since this matter is of concern to all who raise cattle, Lewis stresses that both dairymen and beef men should attend this meeting which is the only one to be held in this area.

Hearings to determine the need for statewide commodity commissions are assigned by law to the state department of agriculture, reports Don Coin Walrod, county extension agent. Such hearings help the department to determine whether or not there is need for self-help program. If it is determined that there is a need for such programs, then the state department must bring the matter to a vote of the people in the industry. In this case, it would be the cattle raisers of the state.

The Oregon Cattlemen's association has petitioned the department of agriculture for 17 hearings that will be held over the state. Oregon now has commodity commissions in the field of potatoes, dairy, fine fescue seeds, wheat and filberts.

The kind of success that turns a man's head always leaves him facing in the wrong direction.

AUTOMOTIVE FLASHES

Winter months are approaching and for automobile owners this means driving conditions that are more troublesome than those encountered during warmer months. Lower temperatures require lubricants designed to protect your car under these conditions. If the temperature drops below freezing, which it very likely will, radiator antifreeze is a necessity.

Protection to make driving trouble-free all winter is possible. Have us drain your auto's cooling system, properly flush it to remove rust and refill with the proper mixture of permanent antifreeze. A change to the correct weight motor oil as well as transmission and differential lubricants can save expensive repairs to your vehicle at a later time.

WE ARE PREPARED TO SERVICE YOUR CAR OR TRUCK PROPERLY FOR SAFE, TROUBLE-FREE WINTER DRIVING.

While we're talking about car care, let us remind you to keep a car young acting, lubrication must be regular—every 1,000 miles, and it must be done correctly with the right lubricants, in the right amounts at every friction point.
