Fire Prevention Week Emphasizes Need For Caution with TV Sets

Basic safety rules in the use and careful handling of home TV sets are this week being taught Vernonia children enrolled in the Junior Fire Marshal program.

More than 40 million television sets are now in U. S. homes. Although manufacturers are doing everything to make them safe from fire and shock, there are nevertheless some simple precautions which should be taken.

By enlisting children's interest in this increasingly important safety problem, it is hoped that parents, too, will benefit from TV safety tips.

The simple TV "Do's" and "Don'ts" that Junior Fire Marshals are learning are:

1. DON'T try to repair your sets; DO have Dad call a qualified repairman.
2. DON'T tinker with the wires; DO leave the insides alone.
3. DON'T forget a TV set is electric; DO keep it away from walls and curtains.
4. DON'T leave set turned on; DO turn it off when you leave the house.
5. DON'T forget there's an antenna and wires; DO have Dad get a TV serviceman to check them once a year.

These rules are featured in the fall issue of the Junior Fire Marshal magazine, highlight of the year-round JFM program created by the Hartford Fire Insurance Company and sponsored locally by Vernonia Insurance Exchange.

MY TREE FARM

is really paying off!

He grows and harvests trees as a crop. Tree farming is like any other kind of farming, except the crop cycle is a little longer. Nature does most of the work. The tree farmer protects his woodland from fire and harvests trees when they're ripe and the price is right.

PULPWOOD. In many areas Tree Farm thinings find a ready market as pulpwood. You can make good wages harvesting and hauling it yourself.

LUMBER. Trees harvested on the woodlot can provide lumber for new barns, sheds or even a new house. Sawlogs are a Tree Farm crop.

POSTS. Costs go down and fences go up with posts harvested on the farm woodlot. Posts and poles also can be a cash crop.
