SS Beneficiaries Who Earn Over $1200 Must File Annual Report

"Many residents of this area will find it necessary to file an annual report of earnings with the Social Security administration," stated Wes Sherman, field representative of the Portland district office. The social security law provides that beneficiaries who earn more than $1200 a year in wages or from self-employment must file an annual report by March 15 of the following year. Many beneficiaries in this area have earned more than $1200 in 1957.

The report is compulsory for all beneficiaries who made more than $1200 in 1957, and failure to file a report may result in the loss of some future benefits. Persons who receive checks as payee for someone else must file a report for that person if one is due. A beneficiary need not file a report if he earned less than $1200 in 1957 nor need he file a report for any year after the year he reaches age 72.

If during the year a beneficiary reported that he was working and expected to earn more than $1200, he will probably receive an annual report form in the mail at the end of the year. If he does not receive such a form, he should be sure to get one from the social security office located in Portland.

The information provided in the annual report will be used to make all necessary adjustments in the number of benefit checks payable. It also gives a beneficiary the chance to show the

New State Withholding Rates Now Available In New Tables

New state withholding tables, reflecting the lower personal income tax rates imposed by the special session of the legislature, have been printed and are now being mailed to Oregon's 52,000 employers. S. W. Horn, state tax commission chairman, said that mailing will be completed this week in time for computing deductions on the first payroll in January.

The new tables are based on an over-all tax reduction averaging 18.7 per cent, Horn said. They have been computed for joint tax returns from all taxpayers claiming two or more exemptions and benefit checks withheld may be assessed for failure to file a report by April 15, 1958.

single returns from zero or one exemption. The tables in use since September 1 were figured on the basis of single returns in all cases, Horn explained.

The tables have been computed by the research section of the tax commission with the objective of closely approximating the actual tax liability under the new laws. Several different pay periods, exemption claims, and salary differences have been incorporated in the tables. Instructions have also been included for handling irregular pay periods as well as bonuses, commissions, and other applications.

Most employers find that the use of withholding tables provide the simplest method of withholding, but some employers using ### punch card equipment or other machine accounting will find it advantageous to use the percentage method permitted by law.

The tax commission has printed a separate percentage-method withholding formula which is currently being mailed to employers using punch card equipment. Additional copies are available on request from the tax commission.

The new tables are printed on green paper to distinguish them from those previously in use and will be enclosed with the employers quarterly report, thus saving substantial postage while insuring that the forms get into proper hands as quickly as possible. Requests to the tax commission for additional copies will be handled promptly, Horn said.

A few women take up law as a profession; the rest of them simply lay it down.
