1958 Fire Toll In Oregon High

Figures from the state fire marshal's annual report show that $12,756,560 worth of property went up in smoke in Oregon during 1958. This figure is based on insured property. Non-insured property would make the figure even larger.

In addition to the loss of property and of even more concern to us is the death caused by fire. Fifty-two Oregonians were killed in fires last year. The principal causes of these deaths were careless smoking, nine deaths; heating appliances, 7; gasoline, kerosene, solvent, etc., 6; electricity, 5. Thirty-eight of these 52 deaths occurred in residential fires and 5 others in clothing fires.

What were some of the main causes for these fires? Careless smoking and matches, accounted for 37 per cent of the 11,228 cases; oil, grease, tar, etc., 20 per cent; hot metals including electrical devices, 17 per cent; over heated or defective stoves, furnaces, chimneys or flues, 12 per cent. Hickerson urges that everyone check their homes thoroughly for any of these or other fire hazards and remove them before it is too late.
