AROUND THE FARM

Commercial farmers and gardeners frequently complain that problems of insects and diseases are becoming more numerous, making the production of plants and animals more and more difficult. Whether they are serious or joking, this analysis of the situation is actually true.

Vernonia Eagle
THURSDAY, JULY 26, 1962

Archie Newbold, St. Helens, reported having difficulty with his garden peas. Upon examination, we found them infested with a very small weevil. Entomologists at Oregon State University identified them as larvae of the pea leaf weevil.

Long known in Europe as a pest of legumes, the pea leaf weevil was first found in North America in 1936 on the southern tip of Vancouver Island, British Columbia. By 1940, the insect had moved to the adjacent San Juan Islands of Washington. In 1942 it was found on the mainland. After progressing southward at an average rate of 15 miles per year, the weevil reached the Eugene area of Oregon.

Apparently natural conditions of timber-covered mountain ranges have tended to confine the insect to the valley areas of southwestern British Columbia and Western Washington and Western Oregon.

Pathologists in the OSU plant clinic report that the trouble was caused by a fungus and that was the first time that the particular fungus had been found on the Canby variety. The pathologists felt that the unusually wet cool spring had a great deal to do with the development of the disease.

Fortunately, control in this case is not very difficult. An application of lime-sulfur, mixed 1 to 10 about December 1 and a second spray just before the new growth starts—probably the latter part of March, is recommended.

Red raspberry problems have been rather numerous this year. Again the type of spring we had probably had a great deal to do with it. As a result of the complaints that have come in, we have discovered that many folks have omitted this dormant lime-sulfur spray. While we may get by some years, these sprays are pretty important to continued success. Lime sulfur is one of our easier sprays to apply and it is not very costly, either.

Market reports indicate that wool sales last week amounted to 175,000 pounds of graded medium wool at 52 cents, on a grease basis, with common and braid grades at 45 cents. In addition, about 50,000 pounds of mixed lamb and ewe wool was contracted at 45 cents for August delivery in Portland.

Domestic consumption of wool during their first three months of 1962 was about 140 million pounds compared to 123 million pounds during the same period a year ago. The use of apparel wool was up 17 percent and carpet wool up 7 percent.

Imports of dutiable raw wool during the first quarter of this year were substantially above those of a year earlier. Because wool is considered a strategic material for our nation, incentive payments are made to wool growers as a means of encouraging greater production. Funds used in making these incentive payments are derived from import duties charged against foreign wool coming into the nation.

Wool growers participating in this incentive program will receive checks from the ASCS office this week.
