Consumption Of Food High

Restaurant managers say it takes a heap of cooking to feed the estimated 350,000 who will be eating at the Oregon state fairgrounds between Aug. 3-Sept. 8.

In the course of the nine days the public will consume approximately 95,000 pounds of meat (right at 50 tons) all of it Choice Grade. Meat is delivered fresh daily and cut in the Fair's commissary handled by Midget Market of Salem. Of the total amount delivered 40,000 (20 tons) is ground into hamburger and the addition is served in hot dogs, steaks, and other cuts.

In the bakery goods department it is estimated 18,000 dozen burger buns; 3,200 dozen hot dog rolls, 3,500 large loaves of bread, 600 dozen doughnuts will be consumed.

To meet the high standard of quality the Stae Fair commission has set on foods served in fair-ground restaurants, meat is inspected daily and sometimes twice daily by the Marion county and the state health departments.
