Legion Backs State Action

Pursuant to the American Legion pledge to give its support to Governor Mark Hatfield in carrying out any emergency civilian measures needed during the Cuban crisis, the Governor asked, in a letter to Dept. Commander Al Friesen:

1. Assistance in supporting two recruitment programs of the Oregon National Guard: Regular enlistment and enlargement.
2. Civil Defense action, along lines proposed by the Legion.
3. Build-up of the blood bank program.

Friesen responded November 1 by naming three committees to act in the requested areas. Don Eva, Portland attorney, has been named chairman of the National Guard Recruitment committee to be assisted by: Lt. Col. Wm. C. Dyer Jr., Salem, Deputy Commander of 1st Battle Group, 106th Inf., 41st Division; Lt. Col. Earl Johnson, Portland, and Lt. Col. Fred C. Rice, Portland, both members of headquarters staff, 41st Division, Oregon National Guard.

To handle Civil Defense chores, Friesen appointed Malcolm MacEwan, Salem, the department CD chairman, and James Kurahara Hood River director of Civil Defense.

Marthella Bailey, Legion Department blood bank chairman, was named to chairman the build-up of reserves in that program.

Governor Hatfield's letter to Oregon Dept. Commander Al Friesen, dated October 29, stated, "I should hope you would find it possible and feasible to form a special legislative committee to work with civil defense, national guard and this office, in presenting citizen views on these vital matters."

Tax Increase Reason Noted

Robert Y. Thornton, Oregon's present Attorney General and also Democratic candidate for Governor was a visitor to St. Helens, Tuesday. The stopover was a part of a two day campaign swing into Clatsop and Columbia counties.

"The present Governor's claims to have brought great new prosperity to Oregon is not supported by the official record. The total average annual employment in manufacturing dropped from 146.7 in 1959 to 138.6 in 1961. Oregon now has six counties which are classified as depressed areas under the Federal Depressed Areas program," Thornton declared.

Thornton also blamed the recent increase in property taxes in Columbia county on the present state administration.

"This is the direct result of the 'timber tax giveaway law' which was passed by the last legislature and signed by the governor. This gave a big cut in taxes to the big timber corporations in the state at the expense of the homeowner, farmer and small business man. Thornton said that if elected governor he would call for either the repeal of the law or drastic changes in its operation.

The Democratic candidate pointed out that in Columbia county alone $2,408,772 in timber land was taken off the tax rolls and the burden shifted to the rest of the property tax payers.

Dinner Honors 4-H Leaders

Columbia County 4-H leaders were honored Monday evening, November 5, at a dinner sponsored by the Portland General Electric company. The dinner was held in the Warren Baptist church at 7:00 p.m. Mr. James Johnston of Portland connected with Crown Zellerbach corporation talked on the "Reflections of an American." Special entertainment numbers were presented by Carol Taranoff of Columbia City and Linda Sue Gorin of Warren. Both girls are 4-H club members.

Four-H club leaders were presented with leadership pins by a representative of the St. Helens branch of the U. S. National Bank of Portland.

Mr. R. A. Leith, manager of the Public Finance company of St. Helens, acted as toastmaster.

IT'S YOUR LAW

Respect for Law Makes Democracy Live

UNFINISHED CRIMES

The law punishes attempted as well as completed crimes. Thus attempted murders or robberies are themselves crimes.

Sometimes a criminal cannot carry out his plans; He tries and fails to extort money from an undercover policeman; a pick-pocket reaches into an empty pocket.

Can such acts be punished? Most likely, yes. Two recent cases have tended to do away with "impossibility" as a defense against prosecution.

In one case the police caught two men trying to steal tires and told the owner. The thieves told police that a Mr. Fence wanted to buy the tires. A plain clothes officer and the thieves delivered the "stolen" tires to Fence. When he accepted them and paid for them they charged him with attempt to receive stolen property.

Fence said: "Impossible! How could I receive stolen property when it was not really stolen?"

The court found Fence guilty anyhow: he had attempted to commit a crime.

Still the law cannot prosecute a person for merely thinking about doing a crime—if he goes no further.

Note: Oregon lawyers offer this column as a public service. No person should apply or interpret any law without the aid of an attorney, who is completely advised of the facts involved. Even a slight variance in facts may change the application of the law.

For an "attempt" to stand up in court, one must do something which would have become a crime if things had gone on as planned.

"Abandonment" is another defense to a charge of an attempt. Slug gave up his plan to rob a store when he spotted the police watching him. Giving up the attempt at this point was no defense to a charge of attempted robbery. For Slug had given up his robbery only when police interrupted him. He was guilty, not of robbery, but attempted robbery.

To "solicit" another person to commit a crime is also a crime. And, if two or more people plot a crime (and do something toward carrying it out), they also commit the crime of conspiracy even though they do stop short of the actual crime. In fact, "conspiracy" to commit a crime may carry more severe penalties than doing the crime itself.

AROUND THE FARM

Extensive damage to roofs of farm buildings, where most corrugated metal roofing is used, will mean either repair or replacement. Where replacement is to be done, and in some cases of repair, there will be an opportunity to select from a number of different types of roof materials.

When properly applied by nailing to at least two-inch material with the proper size nails, little corrugated iron was damaged in the recent windstorm. Aluminum did not always fare so well due to the nails pulling through the metal.

Purchasers of aluminum have little choice of grade of roofing, but the story on corrugated iron is different. Not only does the grade of metal vary, but the zinc galvanizing is an important factor. Some metal roofing is advertised as being copper bearing, but since most roofing of this type is made from scrap iron, it is only natural that some copper would be present. The amount is not adequate to effect the life of the metal.

With the galvanizing the situation is different, in that the amount of zinc decidedly effects the life span of the roofing. Roofing that has at least two ounces of zinc coating carries the American Zinc Institute seal. Such material should have a life span of approximately 25 years compared to about ten for roofing that has only 1 1/2 ounces of zinc or less.

A little-used type of roofing that certainly has merit for use on farm buildings is marine plywood or plywood that is made with weather-proof glues. Applied somewhat after the manner of shingles, such roofing is performing quite well in trials to date. In use, it is noted that the upper veneer layer of the plywood will check and crack, but these extend only to the first glue line.

In choosing roofing, it may be well to recognize that some materials add considerably to the strength and rigidity of the building. Others do not. Plywood, corrugated metals, and the common red cedar shingles are all materials that tend to add to the rigidity of the building to which it is applied.

Predators taken by County Trapper Robert Walker, Vernonia, total 20 for the month extending from mid-August to mid-September. Included in the take were 11 coyote, six bobcat and three bear. In addition, Bob also caught two opossum which are generally listed in the nuisance class, although they may certainly do considerable damage upon occasion.

A shorn wool incentive price of 62 cents was recently announced by USDA for the 1963 marketing year which will start April 1 and end December 31, 1963.

The USDA has also announced that the marketing year under the wool payment program is being changed from an April-March basis to a calendar year upon the recommendation of producers. As a result, the 1963 marketing year will become a nine-month period from April 1 to December 31. After 1963, the marketing year is scheduled to be on a 12-month calendar year basis.

"Tips for Iowa Tree Growers", an Extension Service publication, appropriately notes that "before long, it will be income tax time again. Quite often, small timber owners pay more Federal income tax on their woods operations than the law requires. This results in part from not realizing that sales of timber and forest products can frequently be reported as a capital gain rather than as ordinary income. If you sell standing timber which you owned more than six months prior to the beginning of the tax year, it can be treated as a capital gain. This capital gains method also applies to Christmas tree sales as long as the trees are more than six years old when they are cut.

"Tax savings can also be had by deducting an allowance for depletion which represents the owner's investment in the timber harvested. A woodland owner can apply for allowance for depletion no matter what kind of timber sale he has made, or whether he reports his proceeds as ordinary income or capital gains.

"Owners who have not made a sale of timber or forest products in 1962 can also make tax savings by deducting from gross income operating expenses, which include: the cost of labor, trucks, tractors, chain saws or other equipment hired by you to do woods work. Any of this equipment purchased in 1962 can be depreciated as a capital expenditure. Operating costs such as gas, oil, machine maintenance, materials and supplies, and fees paid to consulting foresters or accountants are also wholly deductible.

"Losses of timber, from fire, windstorm, ice, hail, etc., can also be claimed as a deduction on your income tax return. The measure of damage will normally be the difference between the sound value of the timber before the casualty and its damaged value after the casualty. Complete discussion of forest tax reporting is given in Agriculture Handbook No. 52, entitled, THE SMALL TIMBER OWNER AND HIS FEDERAL INCOME TAX which is on sale by the Superintendent of Documents, Washington 25, D.C., at 20 cents per copy."

Generally speaking, the guy with a closed mind has an open mouth.
