IT'S YOUR LAW

Respect for Law Makes Democracy Live

KEEP TAX RECORDS

Now is the time to start a procedure that will aid you with next year's income tax calculations. That is to maintain a record of your income and outgo. Such a record can be simple and brief, but it may save you tax dollars and many hours of work.

The average man who works for a salary thinks he doesn't have to concern himself about keeping books and records. But he should!

Whether or not you run a business of your own, you have a partner who each year is claiming a substantial interest in your personal income. The law requires that you keep books for him in case he ever asks for an accounting.

Perhaps you own your home or are paying for it in installments. It's likely that some day you may sell that house. When you do you'll want to be able to prove whether you realized a gain or a loss on that sale. If a gain resulted, it will probably add to your income tax. If a loss was suffered, well, that's another thing.

You may have made certain improvements on the house, while you lived in it, but unless you can show what out-of-pocket expense you incurred while making them, you may not get credit for them in your cost basis.

It may be that you are receiving an annuity on an insurance policy. If so, do you know how much that policy costs you and how much of that cost you have recovered tax-free to date?

There are many kinds of transactions you enter into that may some day affect the computation of your personal income tax. The best proof of the cost of anything you've purchased is a receipted bill or cancelled check. If one of these pieces of evidence relates to any transaction that may affect your income in later years, it is a good idea to keep it.

INCOME TAX EXEMPTIONS

Having a baby in December rather than in January can result in an extra $120 or more in your pocket. This is so because you are entitled to a $600 deduction for federal tax purposes if a dependent was alive during only part of the year. A taxpayer and his spouse are entitled to one $600 exemption each and one exemption for each dependent.

You may claim a dependency exemption of $600 in respect of a relative with less than $600 gross income who receives over half his support from you. A non-relative may also qualify as your dependent but only if he or she lived in your home during the entire year.

You may be able to claim an exemption for a person who otherwise qualified as a dependent even if you contributed less than half his support. If you and several other persons together contributed over half the support of the dependent and no one person contributed over half, you may claim the exemption if the other members of the group will agree not to do so by signing Form 2120, Multiple Support Declaration, obtainable from your local Revenue Service office. This special rule is useful, for example, where you and your brothers and sisters together support one of your parents or other relative.

The $600 gross income limitation does not apply if the exemption is claimed for your own child who did not reach age 19 in 1958 or who was a full time student. Regardless of the amount earned by such a child you may claim the exemption so long as you provided over half of the child's support. The effect is to allow a double exemption because the child is entitled to claim an exemption for himself in reporting his own income. Scholarships received by a student are disregarded in computing the support provided by the parent. An important point to remember is that a married child for whom you claim an exemption may not file a joint return with his or her spouse.

YOU AND YOUR AGENT

What if you paid Johnnie to mow your lawn and he mowed down and ruined your neighbor's hedge? Do you pay for Johnnie's act? Most likely.

Or suppose you want a loaf of bread for dinner and ask a friend to take your car and get it. On the way to the store, suppose he runs down old Mrs. Higgenbotham. Are you responsible? Again, Most likely, at least in part.

Why is this? Didn't you tell everybody to be most careful?

In both cases, you got someone to act for you. Under the law, what he did, you did. You were responsible for what he did since he was your "agent."

Why does the law make you, as principal, responsible for your agent's acts?

Well, agents do most of the world's business. And for our affairs to go forward, people must trust your agent as if you yourself acted. "Third parties"—other people doing business with you or your agent—have a right to expect you to stand behind his word.

Suppose your agent does what you told him to do, or even suppose you let third parties think he is your agent when he is not. Then you may well have to make good on any deal he makes in your name. He is either your agent or your "ostensible agent." This is all the same when it comes to paying the bills, or repairing the damage.

In most ways partners are agents for each other. What one does can bind the others. One day you and your partner may decide not to buy anything for more than $100 unless you both sign the contract. If your partner goes ahead anyway and buys an article for more than $100 without telling you, your private word with your partner won't protect you from recovery by the salesman, if the salesman did not know of it.

Because our business world is so complex, the law of agency bulks large today. For it defines and enforces the rights and duties of principals, agents and third parties.

THE PUBLIC WELFARE ?

Questions about public welfare which are of general interest are answered in this column as a public service. Help with individual problems is available at your county welfare office.

Won't public welfare become unnecessary as a result of the "Poverty Act"?

Although the Economic Opportunity Act will help many people prepare for and obtain employment so that they will not need public assistance, there will still be need for public welfare services of many kinds. For example, public welfare provides a variety of services to children including adoption, foster home care and child welfare services to children in their own homes; it has responsibility for licensing of private child caring agencies. In addition to child welfare services, public welfare provides assistance to many aged, blind and disabled persons who will not be able to support themselves through training for jobs.

My sons have different earnings and different sized families. If I apply for old age assistance will they have to contribute equally to my support?

The Relative Responsibility Law sets up a relative contribution scale which relates the amount of contribution required to income and family size. This scale will determine the size of the contribution required from each of your sons.

Is any disciplinary action taken if a welfare recipient becomes pregnant out of wedlock?

No. Efforts made in some other states to legislate against illegitimacy have been largely unsuccessful and have often had the effect of punishing the child for the circumstances of his birth rather than of changing the parent's behavior. Instead of disciplinary action, the public welfare department works with the mother to help her consider the reasons for her behavior and the effect it is likely to have on her and the child.

Why does welfare pay hospitals a different amount than a private patient would pay for similar care?

Because of the enormous volume of bills coming in from hospitals for the care of welfare recipients, public welfare simplifies its procedures by paying a specified rate for each day of hospital care regardless of the services performed. This rate is based on the hospitals' average cost per patient per day and is carefully audited by public welfare to make sure it is accurate. Since it is based on an average, the billing for a given period may be either higher or lower than that paid by a private patient for similar services.

Another factor affecting the difference between public welfare bills and private payments is the limitation of the welfare budget. Public welfare is required to keep its hospital and other expenditures within the amount of money it has available and has found it necessary to pay hospitals a percentage of their total bill instead of the full amount.

I have a small amount of burial insurance. Do I have to cash it in before applying for assistance?

If you are over sixty-five, you may keep a burial policy with cash value up to $500 in addition to your other resources, provided the beneficiary assumes full responsibility for your burial. Younger recipients may maintain insurance or other liquid assets having cash value amounting to not more than $250, or $500 for a couple.

A man I know was in an accident and is suing the person responsible. Now he is getting welfare help so he can hold out for more money. Why is this permitted?

Whenever assistance is provided to a person who has a pending claim for personal injury, public welfare has a lien on the amount he receives so that it can recover the assistance granted to him out of whatever he collects. This makes it possible for him to maintain himself until he can get a reasonable settlement without any ultimate loss of public welfare funds.

I've always given money to charity, why can't I get welfare help now? Public welfare is supported entire-

Health Group Urges Caution

The Columbia county health department has asked residents of flooded areas to take special precautions to protect their health.

County health officials advised that those who were exposed to flood waters receive protective shots of vaccine against typhoid fever as quickly as possible. They pointed out that since typhoid germs enter the body only through the mouth, people should be particularly careful about eating anything that has been in the flood waters.

Typhoid vaccine is being provided by the health department and is available through St. Helens physicians offices without charge. Three shots are usually needed, and 30 days are required to develop effective immunity, health officials point out. They stressed that the free vaccine is available only to those people and families who live in or work in the flooded areas, or those who engage in clean-up work.

Potential health hazards can be avoided by keeping children out of disaster areas; frequent hand washing, especially before eating, as well as keeping warm and getting plenty of rest, the county health officials warned.

Salesman to Area Claimed

Robert E. Fawcett, Astoria, who for many years was a salesman servicing this area for Sunshine Biscuit company, died suddenly in his car at Astoria last Thursday on his 62nd birthday.

Reports are that he had helped a neighbor push his car out of a snow bank, then got in his own car and drove only a half block when he hit a telephone pole. Neighbors found him dead inside the car, the apparent victim of a heart attack.

Fawcett had worked for the Sunshine Biscuit company for 37 years and for the past 32 years had been a salesman serving Clatsop, Tillamook and Columbia counties in Oregon and Pacific county in Washington. He made regular trips to Vernonia for the company.

Flood Damage To Be Surveyed

Columbia county's USDA defense board, under the chairmanship of ASCS office manager William Armstrong, met at the county courthouse December 23 to initiate surveys of flood damage. Civil Defense Director Bill Litherland also attended the meeting.

As one of the counties declared a disaster area by Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman, special emergency aid programs are expected to be developed to aid in recovery of damaged areas.

ly by taxes, not by contributions to charity. Your eligibility for help from welfare is based on need as defined by law and by rules and regulations of the State Public Welfare Commission. Your previous tax payments or charitable contributions have no effect on your eligibility for welfare benefits.

We are retired people with a small pension. Our little granddaughter is in our care while both her parents are hospitalized and without income. Can we get help just for her needs or would she have to go to an institution?

The purpose of the Aid-to-Dependent Children program is to enable a child to remain with members of its family while deprived of the support or care of one or both of its parents. If you are unable to provide for your granddaughter, there's a good possibility that ADC could provide a small monthly grant to cover her food, clothing and personal incidentals.
