Service Asks Worker Orders

Oregon Department of Employment and its division, Oregon State Employment Service, today urged employers and householders to order workers now to help alleviate the usual increase in wintertime unemployment.

The 28 Employment offices in Oregon have the largest files of qualified workers in their communities for all kinds of jobs. The unskilled job seeker is most in need of work this time of year. Winter yard work, flood clean-up and fix-up work, various wintertime farm jobs, are some of the jobs that these workers can fill. The Employment Service also has applicants for all kinds of skilled jobs, both part-time and full-time.

Employers are urged to contact their local State Employment Service office for all their immediate worker needs.

County Superintendent To Arrange Classes

College classes offered by the Oregon State System of Higher Education, division of continuing education, on a request basis must be scheduled prior to February 8, 1965. Persons interested in specific classes should contact the Columbia county school superintendent's office, 207 Court House, St. Helens, telephone 397-0028.
