Counties Unite On SCS Reports

A meeting to finalize the North Coast Resource Area report was held at the post office in Astoria in September. Attending this meeting called by the U. S. Soil Conservation Service were the following people representing their respective organizations: John Christie, Astoria, state forestry department; William Armstrong, Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, Clatsop and Columbia counties; Jean H. Hallaux, Astoria Chamber of Commerce; Reuban A. Mattson, Astoria and Richard Detzel, Tillamook, private citizen; H. G. Smith, county extension, Tillamook; Jack H. Wood, county extension, Clatsop; Bill Wick, county extension, Tillamook; Archibald Pye, Jack Madison, James L. Wharton, Carl Rowe and Henry Marti, Tillamook Public Utility district; Rolfe Anderson, U. S. Forest Service; Carl Mosen, Oregon Fish commission; Lee Wooden, West Oregon Electric Co. and county land use committee, Clatsop county; Lou Baxter, Farmers Home Administration, Columbia and Clatsop counties; Hugh Caton, U. S. National Bank; Oke Ekholm, Roy Johnson, Tom Fujii, Frank Richman, C. H. Gregg, Don Leach, Soil Conservation Service; B. R. Lausch, E. W. Bjork, Clatsop Soil and Water Conservation district.

The tentative report was completed last year and was issued for review last fall. This meeting was then called to make necessary changes and to finalize the information in it for publication this winter. It then will be available to interested individuals or organizations.

This report is designed to (1) to present information on the past and present use of water and related land resources, (2) furnish data on the production resulting from this use, (3) assess the magnitude of erosion, flooding and nitrate of water-related problems drainage, (4) indicate the probable future direction of water and land use for agriculture and forestry in relation to other competing uses and (5) outline a general program for water and land resources management to be used as background for future detailed study and planning. This study was the result of a cooperative agreement by the U. S. Department of Agriculture and the State Water Resources Board of Oregon and is being carried on through out the state in other resource areas.

An interesting sidelight to the meeting was a discussion on the possibilities and future of the North Coast area and how best to assess the total resource picture which presents itself at this time. The possibilities of a Resource Conservation and Development program (RC&D) were brought into the discussion and the possibilities seemed to be worthy of additional studies. In light of this possibility the Soil and Water Conservation districts at Clatskanie, Tillamook and Astoria will be asked to co-sponsor such a program if it is determined by local people to be a feasible and desirable program for this area. Areas presently represented and included for this study will be Tillamook, Clatsop and the western half of Columbia counties.
