IT'S YOUR LAW

Respect for Law Makes Democracy Live

THE RIGHT TO CONDEMN
Under the feudal system in England, all land was owned by the Crown, with specified lords or tenants having the right of possession. Property owners in this country own their own land outright, the states no longer having the ultimate title.

But even in this country, ownership of land is not absolute. It is still subject to the right of the state or federal government, and municipalities in some circumstances, to take the property for certain essential uses. This right is called eminent domain.

Eminent domain laws require that there must be a public use and necessity for the taking of the land, and that the landowner be allowed just compensation for what is taken, and for damages resulting to other land not actually occupied.

The word "taking" as applied to this phase of law has been held to include, besides actual possession, cases where land is damaged, as for instance where land is flooded by backed up waters from a dam, or where a highway cuts through the middle of a farm, making it dangerous to drive livestock to pasture.

Under certain conditions private corporations such as telephone and power companies or other public utilities may exercise the right to condemn property, provided the conditions of public use and necessity and adequate compensation are met.

Landowners may, if they feel compensation offered is not adequate, have compensation determined by a jury but they cannot prevent the taking of their lands if public necessity for such taking is shown.

THE BEAUTY SHOP

Sally sued Madam Jones for the loss of hair after receiving a so-called "no heat cold wave" in Madam Jones' beauty parlor. Sally had intended to get her usual machine permanent wave, but Madam Jones convinced her that her new system was much better.

After the liquid substance had been applied to her hair, Sally complained that her head felt cold and numb. Madam Jones assured her that this was the usual result of the preparation.

About five days later Sally noticed that she was losing her hair. Her hair kept falling out for five or six weeks. The top of her head finally became completely bald and remained that way for about a year.

Sally sued Madam Jones for the mental anguish caused by her baldness.

"Sally consented to the treatment," said Madam Jones. "She can't tell me to go ahead and then sue me if it doesn't work out."

"Madam Jones admitted that she used the wrong solution on my hair," Sally replied. "When I told her that she could give me the new treatment, I thought she knew what she was doing."

Can Sally collect damages from Madam Jones? Yes, said the Massachusetts supreme court.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank all the friends for the cards, flowers and other expressions of sympathy in the recent loss of our loved one. It surely helps to know there are so many friends who care. We deeply appreciate the food brought to our homes and the assistance given in other ways. We are especially grateful to the Rebekah lodge for the lunch prepared for us. All these thoughtful acts mean more than words can express.

YOUR JOB

(NOTE: This column is written weekly and published by this newspaper as a public and educational service. If you have questions with regard to the Oregon State Employment Service and/or Unemployment Insurance, please address them to Oregon Department of Employment, att., Informational Representative, 402 Labor and Industries Bldg., Salem, Oregon 97310.)

QUESTION: What rate are employers now paying for unemployment insurance?

ANSWER: Oregon employers are, effective January 1, 1965, receiving the maximum savings under the experience rating provisions of the Department of Employment Law. In addition to the lower schedule of tax rates, the tax base has been reduced from $3,800 in 1964 to $3,600 in 1965. The tax rate schedule with rates ranging from 1.2 percent to 2.7 percent will result in an average tax rate of 1.9 percent of the state's total payroll compared to an average of 2.3 percent during 1964. A total of 28,401 of the 34,111 eligible employers were assigned rates below the base of 2.7 percent rate with 15,073 employers at the minimum rate of 1.2 percent. This results in a saving of more than $6 million dollars to Oregon employers during the calendar year of 1965.

QUESTION: What do counseling services of the Oregon State Employment Service include?

ANSWER: Socio-economic changes and upheavals in society and the world of work have continued to increase and broaden the responsibilities of Employment Service counseling. Presently, the Employment Service has nearly 50 full time counselors in offices throughout the state, with an anticipated increase to meet current needs.

The counseling service rendered varies according to the individual applicant, but all employment counseling is directed toward increasing an individual's employability. For example, ES counseling may range from assisting an applicant in verifying a vocational choice to intensive services including depth interviews, aptitude testing, group counseling, and preparatory services prior to referral to training or a suitable job in line with his vocational goal.

Employment Service counseling is available to all applicants who desire assistance in making vocational decisions.

Angling Rules Now Available

Oregon angling regulations for the 1966 season are now available to fishermen or should be by the time they take effect on January 1. Regulations in booklet form are now being shipped to license dealers around the state as rapidly as possible with the final shipments to be completed within a week or ten days.

Anglers are reminded that license agencies will receive the booklets by county in alphabetical order. Because of this, fishermen in Baker, Clackamas, and other counties at the head of the listing will have the booklets available a week in advance of those counties such as Washington and Yamhill.

Fishermen are urged to check the regulation booklet carefully before they head for fishing waters in order to become familiar with changes or new regulations in effect for the 1966 season.

Heavy traffic at intersections will turn ice and snow into a hard, slippery glaze. Be ready for controlled stop by slowing down well ahead of every intersection. This sensible season's greeting is from the Traffic Safety and Education Division of the Oregon Department of Motor Vehicles.

Gratitude is a duty which ought to be paid, but which none have right to expect.
