FFA Chapters Observe Week

"Agriculture Is More Than Farming" is this year's theme for National Future Farmers of America Week, February 19-26, proclaimed officially in Oregon Thursday by Governor Hatfield.

Vocational agriculture students in Oregon high schools will join FFA members throughout the nation in activities to inform the public about the importance of the agricultural industry to America, the growing need for farming, and the wide variety of opportunities available in the broad field of agriculture.

"We have such an abundance of food in America that people are taking farmers for granted," said Leonard Kunzman, State Department of Education supervisor of agriculture education and FFA advisor. "Actually, farming is now and always has been our largest and most vital industry, and it is becoming increasingly important with our expanding population. Take away the farms, and for all practical purposes you would destroy the entire community."

In Oregon, 94 local chapters are planning FFA Week observances, including window displays, radio and TV programs, and parent-son banquets.

Membership in the FFA is made up of high school students in vocational agriculture. The national Future Farmer organization has approximately 450,000 members, with 9,000 local chapters in the 50 states and Puerto Rico. Membership in Oregon totals more than 4,000.

Future Farmers choose the week of George Washington's birthday each year for the observance of National FFA Week because Washington's first love was always the farm. He was one of the first in the nation to practice contour planting, crop rotations, fertilization, and other soil conservation and improvement methods.
