OSU Sets Class For Horsemen

The annual horsemen's short course of Oregon State University and the Oregon Horsemen's Association will be at the OSU Horse Center Oct. 19 - 21. It will culminate Horse Appreciation Week, proclaimed by Gov. Tom McCall to honor the horse industry which represents a $130 million-plus business in Oregon.

The short course will include dedication of the center, an open horse show, classes in English and Western riding, demonstrations of skills, instructors and speakers of national prominence - something for all horsemen.

Reg and Leo Camarillo, national champion team ropers, will demonstrate the training and use of horses for team roping Friday (October 19) in the Horse Center arena, beginning at 7 p.m.

On Saturday, there will be discussion and demonstrations on training of western, reining and stock horses by Clyde Kennedy, Sun Valley, California, nationally recognized trainer and judge.

During the afternoon session, Ron Palelek, Vantage, Washington, will give demonstrations on the schooling of the young horse for English pleasure and pleasure driving.

Saturday night there will be a jackpot team roping. There will be a $15 fee for the open section and a $7.50 fee for the pro-novice section.

On Sunday, the OHA-OSU approved horse show will begin at 10 a.m. in the Horse Center arena. Clell Laird of Coos Bay will be judge and classes will be open to all breeds, with several junior classes offered. The entry fee of $1.50 per class can be made the day of the show.

Prune Old Canes On Trailing Berries

Leaf and can spot, a devastating fungus disease of trailing berries can be reduced by taking control measures now.

Extension Agent Don Coin Walrod advises pruning old fruiting canes now rather than follow normal winter pruning practices. This prevents disease-causing spores from being washed into the new canes.

After pruning a fungicide spray needs to be used. Suggested materials include 8 - 8 - 100 Bordeaux, Kocide 101 at four pounds plus one pint of superior-type oil per 100 gallons of water, or tri-basic copper sulfate at six pounds per 100 gallons of water plus a reliable spreader-sticker. Sprays are particularly important for Santiam, Logan, and Cascade berries, but all trailing varieties are candidate for the spray.

If time does not permit pruning old canes, the spray application becomes even more important, says Walrod.

OMSI Auction Gets Truck

The piece de resistance of the 1973 OMSI Auction was delivered to auction officials this morning. The gift of Freightliner Corporation, their contribution is the "most"; the most valuable and, in its orange, brown, and chrome glory, the most beautiful!

Freightliner's contribution, a brand new White Freightliner truck tractor valued at over $30,000, was presented to Bill Cranford, Chairman of the OMSI Auction, by Kenneth Self, President of Freightliner Corporation. Joe Saunders, Senior Vice President of Freightliner and President of the OMSI Board of Trustees, along with Loren McKinley, Executive Director of OMSI, also participated in the ceremonies, as did Otto Siewert, Executive Vice President of the White Freightliner Division of White Motor Company. The truck was driven out of the factory for the first time, and will be on display at OMSI over the weekend.

Self pointed out that the truck is the first White Freightliner conventional offered for sale by Freightliner Corporation to the general public. It marks the first entry of the company into the conventional truck market, and becomes a companion to the already prestigious White Freightliner cab-over-engine truck built by the Freightliner Corporation. The OMSI Auction truck is a super model with a great deal of extra chrome trim, even to such mundane parts as the fuel tank bands. The interior of the cab is finished in crimson custom upholstery and has such features as an AM-FM radio with speakers over both the driver and the passenger.

Freightliner suppliers donated some parts for the new truck, including A.O. Smith Corporation, Engineering and Automotive Division, Milwaukee, Wisconsin; Eaton Corporation, Fuller Transmission Division, Kalamazoo, Michigan; Rockwell-Standard Division, Rockwell International, Troy, Michigan; Farr Company, El Segundo, California; Dana Corporation, San Leandro, California; White Motor Corporation, Eastlake, Ohio; Cummins Engine Company, Columbus, Indiana; Firestone Tire and Rubber Company, Portland, Oregon; and ALCOA in Portland. The beautiful White Freightliner truck, the first of its kind, will be sold at the OMSI Auction November 9 and 10 at Portland's Memorial Coliseum. With this valuable contribution, the OMSI Auction Office has totaled more than $150,000 worth of donated goods and services up to this time, and Chairman Cranford is confident that this year's goal of $250,000 is well within reach.
