OLMSTEAD FINDS THINGS CHANGED

Nyssaite, Visiting in the East, Is Having a Fine Time, But Is Not Satisfied.

J. B. Olmstead, a well-known Nyssa farmer, who recently leased his ranch and left for an extended visit in the East, is now at Monticello, Iowa. He writes the Journal and other friends as follows:

Kind Friends—I will write a few lines. My health is pretty good, except a bad cold. I left Dell Rapids, South Dakota. The weather there at that time was real damp, with snow and rain, blustery and cold. So I cut my visit short, with a promise that I would return. I came here on the morning of the fourth of April, and it was snowing and cold, with some rain. You can imagine about how I felt. Well, it made me think of the dear old state that I had left and my home that I had enjoyed so many years on the banks of the old Snake river.

But I wanted a visit and I am getting it. I am having a fine time, but am not satisfied. I had been away too long—21 years. In that time there are always so many changes—people leaving, some returning, others dead.

I see it is far different from my home state, so far as health is concerned. They have too many storms and the weather is too cold and changeable for the people to enjoy good health. There is not enough brilliant and bright sunshine.

Well, I guess I will bring my letter to a close by wishing my many dear friends health and happiness. As ever yours,
J. B. OLMSTEAD.

Sale of Holsteins.

As advertised in the Journal last week, an auction sale of thoroughbred Holstein cows will be held at Ontario next Saturday. This will be an excellent opportunity for dairymen to improve their herds, and incidentally add to the prosperity of this section. These sales are being held through the efforts of the Ontario commercial club, and is one of the many ways in which an organization of that character can be of lasting benefit to a community.
