CONSERVE THE FOOD SUPPLY

No phase of preparedness for the National crisis which we are now facing is of greater importance than that of the food supply. The present food shortage will be greatly intensified by the withdrawal of many producers who are being called into the military service. With our entrance into the war, our obligations to furnish food to the allied nations will be greatly increased. We must meet the situation. This can be done by increasing production and by the more economical use of food.

Vacant city lots and back yards afford the best means for prompt relief in production. If these are properly used for raising vegetables and poultry, thousands of dollars worth of food products can be added to the normal supply in a few months. At least 60 per cent of the city lots and back yards now available are not being used. In the interest of the nation, intelligent, sober and well organized efforts should be made to aid in improving the situation.

The Oregon Agricultural College suggests that all organizations interested in the public welfare should get together and plan a campaign for their respective communities. A joint committee representing commercial clubs, women's organizations, parent-teachers' associations, school officials and other organizations interested in public problems should appoint representatives to serve on a joint committee to be charged with the direction of the campaign. A survey should be made immediately to determine the amount of ground available and the number of persons who may be enlisted to put it to the best use. Encouragement and instruction should be continued in a systematic way throughout the season. The Oregon Agricultural College has prepared a special series of pamphlets on poultry keeping, vegetable gardening, the economical use of foods and canning foods, which will be available to the people of the state. It will be glad to send a supply of these publications upon receipt of evidence that this work is being efficiently organized in our community.

To hear of the British forces in Syria contemplating the siege and capture of Jerusalem is suggestive of the famous struggle between Richard the Lion Heart and Saladin a few years back. We predict the Saracen will put up somewhat less of a fight this time, however.

As duly elected president of Mexico, General Carranza may have a freer hand than he had as first chief, and it is a hand that will bear watching.

It was a masterstroke of the Russian people when they kicked the czar off the throne. Now let us see if the Germans and Austrians have equally high courage and patriotism by emancipating themselves

America was "too proud to fight" a helpless and pitiful country like poor old Mexico, but as in the days of Washington she is not too proud to fight the foes of liberty and humanity.

One of the best arguments in favor of enlistment is the fine physical appearance of the Nyssa boys who returned from the front and are now "somewhere in Idaho."

Now is the time for all good Americans to rally around the flag.
