Peru and its Indians

MAKING CHICHA, THE NATIONAL DRINK

ACCORDING to recent statistics the population of Peru comprises 4,000,000 people. This population is divided as follows: One million two hundred and sixty thousand mestizos, or mixed races from intermarriages of the whites with the Indians, 600,000 whites, 100,000 negroes, 400,000 Orientals and 2,000,000 Indians.

The great problem of Peru is the problem of the Indian, who is not only numerically the important factor in the country, but is also virtually the only support of the vast majority of the population, according to the Lima correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor. It is a common saying that all Peru lives off the Indian. If the Indian was taken out of Peru today the country would suffer until the remaining portion of the population had learned by necessity to cultivate the land and to make a living.

The ancient Inca empire, of which Cuzco was the center and the home of the Inca kings, extended originally from beyond Quito to the southern coast of Chile, including what is now known as Ecuador, Peru and Chile, and these ancient peoples had here a civilization in many respects more advanced than that of the Spanish adventurers who conquered them.

When Pizarro came to Peru there were nearly 8,000,000 of these inhabitants of the Inca's realm in Peru alone, industrious, law-abiding, practicing progressive arts and having irrigated farms, traces of which are still to be seen along the high peaks of the Sierra tablelands. Their old homes and fortresses, their temples and their architecture reveal a state and quality of knowledge and architectural skill resembling that of ancient Egypt.

When the Spaniards came, not to colonize so much as to conquer, and exploit, the Indians were driven from their homes, the country in many instances went to waste, people becoming slaves of their ruthless masters, who proceeded to make the quiet, tractable Indians into beasts of burden, killing them whenever they opposed.

The present evil traits of the Indian, his dishonesty, suspicion of the white man, and much of his sloth have been the result of the condition under which he has been controlled for 400 years or more. During the old Inca regime such sins as lying, stealing and adultery were punishable by the extreme penalty, and the home life of these ancient people was far better in character than that generally found today among their successors.

Trustworthy and Frugal. Nevertheless, you will be told by those people who know the Indian of the interior especially that he forms the best and most trustworthy element in Peru today. He is hard working and frugal, living on a small patch of land, which is frequently owned by the community or by a large landholder.

He will work day after day for his masters, receiving only ten cents a Peruvian money, which is equal to five cents in gold, at the end of the week, receiving an additional amount, making his daily wage for the week amount to about 15 cents gold a day, in the case of the Indians who are

FROM SUGAR TO CELLULOSE

Scientists Have Been Unable to Learn From Plants and Trees the Secret of Its Production.

There are certain combinations of carbon and hydrogen known as sugars—many of them, but all alike in that they are made up of carbon atoms strung together in a chain, with hydrogen atoms stuck on along the side of the chain. Now, suppose you take a number of these sugar molecules, as the smallest particles imaginable are called, and bunch them together so that a lot of these units are gathered into one big complex one. Then you have a series of resins or gums. This is what chemists call polymerization. Now let us take these resins and by chemical channery and tricks cause them to bunch their molecules again, to polymerize, and if we carry it far enough we get cellulose. That is, we should if we could.

But trees and plants do this as easy as you please; they start with water and carbonic acid gas, from the air, and this they transmute into sugar, occupy land on the great estates of the Sierras (and there are often as many as 400 families of Indians who live in these large haciendas, as their fathers have for generations) the owner has the right to demand the labor of the Indian for virtually any work he requires and at any time. At time of planting, weeding and harvesting all the Indians are requisitioned to cultivate the great estates, and when the owner wishes to send his produce to market he has simply to call upon his Indians, who respond with their trains of llamas, carrying the produce many leagues to the nearest shipping place without charge to the owner.

While this appears at first sight nothing short of slavery conditions, the lot of Indians in these mountains is not so bad as it might seem. They have their own bits of land, which they cultivate assiduously and which yield them a good living, and they have their own sheep, llamas and alpacas and a certain number of cattle. Their grazing lands are apportioned to them and they are protected in their rights. There is no danger of their homes being taken from them. In fact, the Indians in the interior are so truly wedded to the place where they and their fathers have lived for generations that it is virtually impossible to move them from their homes, and when the land changes hands they are practically sold with the land, and simply transfer their allegiance from one master to another.

Garbed in Gay Colors. There is no more picturesque sight to be seen in South America, if indeed anywhere in the Orient, than these Indians journeying on foot behind their long trains of llamas, laden with alpaca or wool, on their way to the market places. A market place like that at Sucre, when on Sunday many hundreds of Indians gather, leaving their llamas and burros corralled on the hillside, while they throng the central plaza with their wares for sale, makes an unforgettable picture.

The first impression is one of color—color everywhere. It is one vast sea of variegated ponchos, shawls and head-dresses. Women in gay dresses of red or blue or purple are sitting in front of their little huts, on which they display the food they have for sale, or the socks which they have made, or the ponchos they have woven, and as they bargain with the passer-by their hands are always busy with the little spindle dangling from their arm, on which they are spinning wool from which they will make other socks of ponchos.

They are never idle, these Indian women, as they trot along the paths behind their llamas, as they herd their sheep on the hillside or as they come through the streets of Cuzco; you see that little spindle being twirled by the hand which has become so used to the labor that the motion is performed mechanically.

Legal marriage among these Indians of the Sierras is not general, although the Indian chooses his mate at an early age, and his loyalty to her and her family is usually lifelong, forming a striking contrast to conditions found among the cholos or mestizos occupying the towns and villages.

An Inside Bath Makes You Look and Feel Fresh
Says a glass of hot water with phosphate before breakfast keeps illness away.

This excellent, common-sense health measure being adopted by millions.

Physicians the world over recommend the inside bath, claiming this is of vast importance to the body's cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing ill health, while the pores in the ten yards of bowels do.

Men and women are urged to drink each morning, before breakfast, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of helping to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible material, poisons, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Just as soap and hot water cleanse and freshen the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the eliminative organs.

Those who wake up with bad breath, coated tongue, nasty taste or have a dull, aching head, sallow complexion, acid stomach; others who are subject to bilious attacks or constipation, should obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little but is sufficient to demonstrate the value of inside bathing. Those who continue it each morning are assured of pronounced results, both in regard to health and appearance.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE
BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

Meet Delicious of Supper Parties. "How do we give a ginger-bread and ice-cream party?" asked the Queen of the Fairies.

"Ah, that's my secret," said the Queen of the Fairies.

"Does it mean that we are to have ice-cream and ginger-bread for supper?" asked Fairy Ybab.

"That's probably it," said Fairy Princess Twilight-Bell.

"It's a pretty good guess," said the Queen of the Fairies. "But it's not the right guess."

"Do tell us," said the little Fairies.

"All right," said the Queen of the Fairies, "but first of all, before I let you into the secret, you must go around and ask the guests. I want this to be a big party."

"Hurray!" shouted the little Fairies.

"Who shall we ask?"

"We'll ask the Elves," said the Fairy Queen.

"That's good," said the little Fairies. "The Elves are such dear!"

"And we'll ask the Brownies too," said the Queen of the Fairies.

"Oh, they're such fun," said Fairy Princess Joy.

"And, of course, we'll have to ask old Mr. Giant. A party wouldn't be quite complete without him. And we'll ask Witty Witch."

"Let me ask her," shouted Princess Twilight-Bell. And the Fairy Queen consented.

"And we'll have the Gnomes and the Goblins," said the Fairy Queen.

"Oh, it's to be a great, big party," said Ybab.

"Indeed, it is," said the Fairy Queen. "I want to have this party tomorrow, so you'd better all start with your invitations. Then, when you come back, I'll let you all into the great ginger-bread and ice-cream party secret. One, two, three, go!" And at that all the little Fairies started off.

They carried their invitations on bits of birch bark, and they were written in letters made out of soft snow and icicles. They looked very lovely, and the Fairies were proud of taking such invitations. The Fairy Queen had made them all herself, and there were lots and lots of them as you can imagine.

For every single guest had to have a separate invitation, and the Fairy Queen had spent a great deal of time over them. This is what the invitations said:

"The Fairy Queen and the little Fairies invite you to a Ginger-Bread and Ice-Cream Party tomorrow afternoon. Come at three o'clock, and most important of all—be hungry!"

"The guests were all on time the next afternoon. Not a Fairy was to be seen."

"This is a surprise party," they all exclaimed.

Soon, out of the deep woods, came a house made of snow with windows made out of the snow too, and icicles were hanging from all sides.

Upon the house were the words: "This may be the last snow and ice day. So let us enjoy it while we may." These words were written in letters of soft mud, for there had been a few warm days when the snow had melted. The Fairy Queen had kept the mud in a little chest, and had kept a fire burning under it, so the mud would not harden. You may not think mud letters sound attractive, but they looked very pretty on the snow-white house.

The house was carried on wheels and drawn by eight prancing ponies—the Fairies' ponies. When they stopped a bagle was heard, and from every window the heads of the Fairies could be seen. Such queer hats as they wore! They were made of baskets and inside each basket was a large platter of ice cream.

The capes of the Fairies were made out of ginger-bread, and as they came out of the house and flew down from the windows they dropped their basket hats and their capes.

And then, in a jiffy, a wondrous table was spread, and of course the supper was one of ginger-bread and ice-cream, quite the most delicious of fairyland supper parties!

Ouch! T! T! T! This kind of rough talk will be heard less here in town if people troubled with corns will follow the simple advice of this Cincinnati authority, who claims that a few drops of a drug called freezone when applied to a tender, aching corn or hardened callous stops soreness at once, and soon the corn or callous dries up and lifts right off without pain.

He says freezone dries immediately and never inflames or even irritates the surrounding skin. A small bottle of freezone will cost very little at any drug store, but will positively remove every hard or soft corn or callous from one's feet. Millions of American women will welcome this announcement since the inauguration of the high heels. If your druggist doesn't have freezone tell him to order a small bottle for you.
