Republican Russia may still find use for Siberia as a cozy anarchist retreat.

As a fop dictator Mr. Hoover will have power to do everything except fire the cook.

There's one thing to be said in favor of a tax on beer—it would make Milwaukee realize that we are at war.

A number of German spies have been caught in America, but so far no fatalities have occurred among them.

Now that Senator Lewis has advocated "hanging" for food pirates, it would be just like 'em to corner the rope supply.

Expert advice to make plenty of preserves this summer will cause many a small boy to regard Mr. Hoover as a special friend.

"War is a great stimulus to the imagination," according to a leading psychologist. This explains some of the crown prince's recent victories.

What kind of a super-general will Von Hindenburg think he is up against when he hears that Joffre has been designated as aide to Pershing?

Iron crosses have become so common in Germany that no discreet U-boat commander will permit his men to carry the extra weight to sea.

When the Schurz opens fire on a submarine, the prestige of a great name will be increased. Carl Schurz fought against German tyranny first, and then fought for America.

The only argument against the suppression of German language newspapers in this country is the fact that thereby, deplorable as it is, thousands of American citizens would not do any reading.

The use of German lunatics in Hindenburg's army has proved a failure, the crazy men so far enlisted having refused to fight. The trouble with Germany is that the wrong people have been locked up in the asylums.

Go to School

The university is publishing a letter showing why our young people should go to college. This applies to attending high school as well.

Every young man eligible for admission to the university or college can serve his country best in the present crisis by making every effort to continue his education, according to word from Secretary of War Baker, brought home to Oregon by President P. L. Campbell, of the University of Oregon, who went east to confer with the Council of National Defense.

It is the young man's first duty to keep his head, refuse to yield to undue excitement or disorganization, and to make every possible effort to prepare himself for more efficient service later. The administration is looking for a long war, President Campbell declares, and the Washington officials fear a shortage of trained and educated men for the army, navy, commerce, transportation, and industry before the trouble is over.

The government has drawn hundreds if not thousands of young men from the universities this year for all sorts of expert services requiring a background of general education. It is going to need hundreds more next year. This supply is already in sight, but there is danger of a shortage in 1919, 1920 and 1921 if the university under graduates and the boys who are now graduating from high school lose their heads, and overlook their own best chance for advancement which is thorough education.

The prospects are that it will be easier this year than ever before for a young man to earn his way through the university, according to President Campbell. "Jobs" are plentiful and pay unusually good, he says, and he believes this condition will continue through next year. The university is considering other arrangements also toward making it easier for the young man who is working his own way.

Cut Down Sugar Bills

If farmers want to cut down their sugar bills these days the department of agriculture advises them to raise sugar beets and make the sirup themselves on the farm for use on the table—on hot cakes, etc. They tell just how to do this too in Farmers' bulletin 823. This bulletin or all of them may be obtained by writing to Representative N. J. Sinnott, house of representatives, Washington, D. C.
