Future of Wool and Sheep Industry

The governments of both England and the United States are taking steps to stabilize this industry which lies at the basis of both food and clothing supply.

The present domestic clip of wool is already taken care of by action of our government and with favorable state legislation flocks will increase.

To establish wool prices in the transition from a war to a peace basis, England has laid plans to purchase all colonial wools for 12 months.

However much Germany may need wool, England and her allies will hold the whip hand by being the greatest wool merchants in the world.

Continental countries are bare of all descriptions of wool clothing and will pick up all supplies of wool banded by the wool trade outside the government control.

There is every reason to encourage the increase of flocks.

KING ARTHUR'S ROUND TABLE

Legend of Sir Galahad and the "Holy Grail" as Recorded by English Writers.

Sir Galahad of Tennyson's "The Holy Grail," was the noblest and purest knight of the Round Table. The title was invented by Walter Map in the "Quest of the Grail." Morley, in his "English Writers," says Sir Galahad was the son of Map's Lancelot and Elaine. The son and namesake of Joseph of Arimathea, Bishop Joseph, to whom the holy dish was bequeathed, first instituted the Order of the Round Table. The initiated at their festivals sat as apostle knights round the table, with the Holy Grail in the midst, leaving one seat vacant as that which the Lord had occupied and which was reserved for a descendant of Joseph, named Galahad. Whatever man else attempted to sit in the place of Galahad the earth swallowed. It was called therefore the Siege (seat) Perilous. When men became sinful, the Holy Grail, visible only to pure eyes, disappeared. On its recovery depended the honor and peace of England, but only Sir Galahad, who was at the appointed time brought to the knights by a mysterious old man clothed in white, and placed in the Siege Perilous—only the pure Sir Galahad succeeded in the quest.

Gulls as Human Food.

"The flesh of gulls," says one of the best-known cyclopedias, "is rank and coarse." So it is. You have only to shoot a gull and cook it to find this is the case, and that as a dinner dish it is a complete failure.

Yet in Iceland gull flesh is one of the principal winter foods of the people. There, in early summer, when the cliffs swarm with nesting gulls, parties are organized and men are let down over the lofty precipices by ropes. They catch young gulls, which are as fat as butter, and send them up to the top in sacks. The moment they reach the top the birds are skinned. A great cauldron of boiling water is ready and into this the bodies are dipped and held for a few seconds. This completely does away with the fishy taste, and the birds are then taken home and hung in smoke until they are thoroughly dried.

When winter comes they are cooked and eaten, and are as delicate as any chicken or game bird, but far more fat and nourishing.

Just Signifying Happiness.

Seward is a favorite in the neighborhood. One afternoon he was wending his way homeward and dinnerward, accompanying himself with the most heartrending howls and mournful noises.

A young neighbor, thinking something dreadful had happened to him, called out: "Why, what's the matter, Seward?" He called back: "Oh, nothing! I'm just happy!"

Benevolence Without Ambition.

At present we behold only the rising of our sun of empire—only the fair beginnings of a great nation. We departed early—we departed at the beginning—from the beaten track of ambition. Our lot was cast in the age of revolution—a revolution which is to bring all mankind from a state of servitude to the exercise of self-government—from under the tyranny of physical force to the gentle sway of opinion, from under subjection to domination over nature.

It was ours to lead the way—to take up the cross of republicanism and bear it before the nations, to fight its earliest triumphs, to illustrate its purifying and elevating virtues, and by our courage and resolution, our moderation and magnanimity, to cheer and sustain its future followers through the baptism of blood and martyrdom of fire. A mission so noble and benevolent demands a generous and self-denying enthusiasm. Our greatness is to be won by benevolence without ambition.—William Henry Seward.

MOBILE HOSPITALS AT FRONT.

It is the task of a mobile hospital to advance to the front lines with the troops to give first aid treatment to the wounded. The mobile hospital unit from base hospital No. 20, University of Pennsylvania, were commended by General Pershing for the courage they displayed under shell fire. Two Red Cross nurses were included in this special distinction for their bravery and devotion to duty.

St. Luke's Hospital at Tokyo, hurried to Vladivostok with necessary hospital supplies and perfected a medical organization to care for the incoming wounded soldiers.

This organization, which was complete from a medical and sanitary standpoint, consisted of a base hospital with a bed capacity for 200, one rolling canteen, two sanitary trains, one field first-aid unit and a disinfecting train.

Dr. Teusler called that there were in active service with his unit fourteen American and seven Japanese doctors and fifteen American and seventeen Japanese nurses. All the American doctors are volunteering their services. Dr. Teusler said he hoped to enlist thirty additional American doctors and fifty American nurses in the Orient.

RED CROSS RELIEF IN THE FAR EAST

Bring Food and Supplies to Czecho-Slovaks in Siberia.

THE American Red Cross has become very active in that part of Russia surrounding Vladivostok, and the prompt medical assistance rendered that distressed country has resulted in saving thousands of lives. The rescue work done by the Red Cross for the Czecho-Slovak refugees has assumed prodigious proportions and is daily becoming greater in scope.

Cabled advices received from Vladivostok report that more than 20,000 Czecho-Slovak refugees, 4,000 of them children, are now being cared for by the American Red Cross at that city. In addition to this relief work, the cables state that the Red Cross Medical organization is attending hundreds of wounded Czecho-Slovak soldiers who have reached Vladivostok after weeks of the most desperate fighting against the pro-German forces.

The condition of the refugees, who were found living in tents and freight cars along the Chinese Eastern Railway west of Harbin, was pitiable. A majority of them are farmers, though there are many coal miners and railway employees in the number, people who were driven from their homes by the Bolsheviks, and some German and Austrian war prisoners.

The work of administering to the wounded Czecho-Slovak fighters, who steadfastly refused to recognize the Bolshevik-German peace, and relieving the distress of the homeless civilians was started the moment their plight was brought to the attention of the American Red Cross.

The relief work was directed by Charles K. Moser, American consul and head of the Red Cross chapter at Harbin. American Red Cross chapters at Tokyo and Shanghai also gave valuable aid.

While waiting for instructions from America, they went ahead and raised funds in Vladivostok which provided temporary relief for both soldiers and civilians.

On authorization of the American Red Cross, Dr. R. B. Teusler, head of Entrance to American Red Cross Hospital at Kiev.

St. Luke's Hospital at Tokyo, hurried to Vladivostok with necessary hospital supplies and perfected a medical organization to care for the incoming wounded soldiers.

The federal bureau of fisheries has been holding hearings at Seattle to consider closing streams in southern Alaska to promote salmon propagation.

Laws and regulations absolutely fair to all must be adopted to protect the industry from looting and extermination, and to increase production.

In Alaska and other Pacific coast waters, streams have been notoriously over-fished, and stream fishing must be restricted.

That was the significance of the action of the people of Oregon in restricting commercial fishing on certain rivers in future.

Conservation of this food product and extension of hatcheries means larger and cheaper supplies of fresh and canned salmon.

This affects the bill of fare and marketing in every home in our country and is why the people are interested in this industry.

Rev. W. F. Shields, pastor.

The New Year opens with opportunities and possibilities such as have blessed the people of the world in no other year. To enter into these larger things we must rise above our frailties and weaknesses and stand in the light and strength of a greater character touched into glory by the spirit of God.

The church of Jesus Christ in all its different households of faith, believes that following peace greater things will be expected of the church because greater opportunities shall open for the Kingdom of God than ever before. The New Era Movement is an endeavor to be prepared on the part of the whole church to conserve the spiritual results of the war, and lead on to still greater ones in peace. May the New Year have from all Christians a pledge of prayer, study, service and stewardship for the kingdom.

Preaching at 11:00 a. m. Sunday School at 10: a. m. Christian Endeavor at 7: p. m. Sacrament of the Lord's Supper and reception of members at the morning service. Morning theme "The New Era Movement."

Sunday School at 10 a. m. (new time)

The public service at 11:00 a. m. This will be a Patriotic Service at which a new service flag with a sufficient number of stars to bring it up to date, will be unveiled. There will be a short program consisting of patriotic songs, a few recitations, and short addresses. Everybody invited, with a special invitation to all returned soldiers and sailors.

The attendance at Sunday School last Sunday was very good for the first Sunday after our long enforced vacation, there being about 40 present. We did not get to have the usual Christmas tree and entertainment, but the school did a commendable thing in giving a liberal offering at the first session after Christmas for the Armenian and Syrian sufferers. The offering amounted to something over $8.00.

A number of people met at the church on Tuesday evening and spent the closing hours of the old year in a watch night service. A short but interesting program was given, after which refreshments were served, the meeting then closing with a devotional period.
