SOME RESULTS OF WARFARE

Awful Price That is Paid in Broken Lives as Well as in Dollars and Cents.

In an aerodrome in France is an attendant. He wakes the boys, looks after their clothes. That is all he is fit for now. But he is treated with the greatest respect, for he was once an aviator himself. Sometimes he murmurs to a newcomer, as if in apology for his present occupation: "I spent 500 hours in the air." Five hundred hours, and he is now a nervous wreck! The other day a Canadian invalid aviator passed through Chicago. We rode with him for a few hours on the train. He will never fly again. He has no lesions, no broken bones. His nerves are gone. In his last flight his muscles, through sheer nervous strain, refused to function, and he dropped like a plummet for 5,000 feet—a mile—and redressed his machine just in time to save himself from annihilation. Each time that the brakes of the train began to grind his lips would set like the jaws of a steel trap. The motion of the slowing train was like that of falling. Each time it happened he would apologize in a stuttering voice. Then he would apologize for stuttering. Before that awful dive from cloudland he had never stuttered, he said. We know something of the cost of dreadnaughts, torpedoes and the shells of 14-inch guns. We give little thought to rifle cartridges. But they cost five cents apiece in America and 15 cents apiece. It is estimated, by the time they are delivered to the firing trench. These rifle cartridges are used in the machine guns, and an ambitious gunner can use up $97.50 worth of them every 60 seconds—almost the receipts from two small Liberty bonds.—Chicago Evening Post.

FLIGHT NOT PRINCE'S FIRST

Former Heir to German Throne Jumped From Window to Escape Oncoming French.

The former crown prince of Germany never took unnecessary chances. His flight from his radical-swept "fatherland" is in keeping with traits he exhibited to the French during many incidents of the great war. In a letter received at Chicago from Sergt. Ralph Sinclair of the mobile ordnance repair division, a veteran of Chateau Thierry, the one-time heir to the German crown is described as jumping from a window to flee from the oncoming French.

The story was told Sergeant Sinclair by the mistress of a French chateau near an American camp. "It was during the first German drive in 1914," Sergeant Sinclair wrote, "when they swept down into France in the full flower of their military power. She saw the tired Poles fall back, worn out with nine days of ceaseless fighting to stem that apparently irresistible army. Then she saw the great German war machine roll on. Some of the German high command came to her chateau, and then a resplendent figure on horseback. He swung an emerald-headed swaggerstick and bore himself with an air of conscious superiority—the crown prince.

"He informed the lady of the chateau that on the morrow his troops would be in Paris. But six miles back the tired Poles had halted and fought the first battle of the Marne. And quite suddenly and unexpectedly the great German army started to go back—with them the resplendent crown prince, who at the first news of defeat jumped from the window of a neighboring chateau where he was staying and fled."

What He Wanted to Say.

General Biddle said at a London garden party:

"The doughboy in France has a lot of trouble with the French language. A doughboy sat on a bench in the Tuilleries gardens one day and thumbed a French phrase book disconsolately.

"This here book," he growled, 'don't tell you what you want to say at all. It tells you how to say the uncle of your mother is sixty-five years old, or the sister of your wife has bought a cow, or the umbrella of your neighbor is in the attic, but I don't want to say nothing of that kind.

"What I'm after," said the doughboy, 'is a book that tells you how to say: "Your face is familiar—ain't we met before?" or "Gee, them eyes!" or "Little girl, you sure do look out o' sight in that swimmin' suit."'"—Dallas News.

"Silence Lanes" in Fogs.

One of the freaks that mariners have to contend with is silence lanes in fogs. These lanes not only retard the sound of foghorns, but stop it entirely. A lookout man on a ship may not be able to hear the foghorn of a close-by vessel if his ship is in one of those silence lanes in time to give warning of its proximity.

It sometimes happens that there is a zone through which the sound carries exceptionally well, and the lookout men of vessels in such a zone are unable to judge the distance away of another vessel, whose foghorn they hear so distinctly.

Horses Generously Fed.

Horses in the veterinary hospitals on the British front in France were fed four times a day. The more debilitated ones were fed five or six times. When they were particularly run down the patients got nothing but cooked foods. They received tonics, too, and it was remarkable to see the improvement in their condition that a few weeks effected.
