THE "BLUES" Caused by Acid-Stomach

Millions of people who worry, are despondent, have apathy, feel depressed, feel blue and are often melancholy, believe that these conditions are due to outside influences over which they have little or no control. Nearly always, however, they can be traced to an internal source—acid-stomach. Not to be wondered at. Acid-stomach, beginning with such well defined symptoms as indigestion, belching, heartburn, bloating, etc., will if not checked, in time affect to some degree or other the entire system. The nervous system becomes deranged. Digestion suffers. The blood is impoverished. Health and strength are undermined. The victim of acid-stomach, although he may not know the cause of his ailments, feels his hope, courage, ambition and energy slipping. And truly life is dark—not worth much to the man or woman who has acid-stomach! Get rid of it! Don't let acid-stomach hold you back, wreck your health, make your days miserable, make you a victim of the "blues" and gloomy thoughts! There is a marvelous modern remedy called EATONIC that brings out such quick relief from your stomach miseries that you are sure to get it. Makes it strong, cool, sweet and comfortable. Helps you get back your strength, vigor, vitality, enthusiasm and good cheer. # Round the World With the Marines

IN THE DAYS OF THE BUCCANNERS

"O H, the English and the Irish and the 'owlin' Scotties, too. The Canucks and Austrorians, and the 'airy French polli. The only thing that bothered us don't bother us no more. It's only 'w'y in 'all we didn't know the Yanks before."

"Well, Joe, I asked them guys what the globe and anchor stood for on their caps and one guy speaks up and says it means that the marines fight all over the world."

"It's a cute little thing, the marines' insignia. Looks something like a boiled huckleberry pudding with a couple of fish-hooks run through it, or like a lady hen hawk trying to hatch out a fractured door knob. I'm sure you get me Gladys. Also, the marines may be identified by their motto. Just where they wear that I've forgotten for the moment, but you're sure to find it somewhere about them if you look close. It is 'Semper Paratus.' No, it has nothing to do with daddies. One 'd' Gladys. It is a phrase taken from the Sioux dialect, I think, meaning literally, 'Where do we go from here?'"

The story of "Bluebeard" and his seven wives, which many will recall having read long ago, is still going the rounds. The fable appears to have originated in France, but it has turned up almost everywhere in the wide world.

It appears that the Virgin Islands have a "Bluebeard" of their own, whom they claim as the original dyed-in-the-wool villain of childhood.

Corporal Lester F. Scott of the Thirty-fifth company, United States Marines, who is stationed at Charlotte-Amalie in the little island recently acquired by the United States, writes as follows of the people and their beliefs:

"On the west shore of the bay lies a settlement of French people called Cha-Chas. These people came originally from the Dutch and French Leeward Islands. They have not married with the negroes, and they live to themselves, resenting any outside interference with their affairs."

"They are a hard drinking race, yet they are the most industrious people on the island, and are especially good enoemors. Their boats are long, narrow affairs made out of scraps of wood. They supply the town with fish and the women make straw hats that find a ready sale among the negroes."

"They will never rise any higher than the true beach-comber, because the race has degenerated, due to in-marrying in so small a colony. With their ruddy faces, stiffly starched blue shirts, tight white trousers and broad-brimmed hats, they present a curious and unusual appearance."

"On the crest of two of the three hills of Charlotte-Amalie nestles the famous old castle of 'Bluebeard' and 'Blackbeard.' These are the two places of interest on the island. The old buccannery were alike as two peas in their habits, but the castles are in no way similar. Bluebeard's castle is the more massive and is separated from Blackbeard's by a distance of a half-mile. After the death of the two pirates, a secret tunnel was found connecting the two castles."

"It is reported that it was through this secret tunnel the two exchanged the women they had captured on ships."

How Germany Looks to Them.

How Germany looks to a marine who was one of the first to cross the Rhine is told in a letter from Lieut. Carrol J. Single of the Sixth regiment of marines, to his parents who live in Stockton, Cal. From somewhere in Germany he wrote the following:

"The people near the border were

HOW GERMAN LOOKS TO A MARINE

Just plain squareheads, dumb looking, stolid, and unusually stupid. But two days ago we penetrated into the wonderful Rhineland and it is glorious here. We saw for the first time what we had not thought to find—pretty girls and mothers. There is nothing so restful to tired feet as the sight of a pretty girl. No, sir!

"The country we are in is more like America than anything I've seen since Paris. They have fine stone houses and many beautiful mansions and hotels here. This is the country of those famous German baden, or baths, where the sick come to drink of that magic elixir of life that Ponce De Leon failed to find in Florida."

Lieut. Single journeyed to Neuenahr and then visited the "Wienbergen" or wine mountains and finally reached Brohl, which he describes as follows:

"I am now in Brohl, a small town. The Rhine flows two hundred yards from my window. In front of us are mountains and in back are mountains terraced for grapes and on the river at the foot of the mountains huddle the small towns. The river here is about 600 yards across and flows restfully along into the distance. All is in true German order and big dredgers are working to make a harbor."

"Last night I met Captain Stone, one of the best friends I have known in the service. He would have naught but that I should dine with him. We climbed to a big castle on a hill back here overlooking the Rhine. I stepped in the door and started (like the movies have it) from a realistic armored man on my left only to find a worse seconded on my right. In the great master's den were many stuffed foxes and birds, also deer horns. Captain Stone had roast chicken, and it was a real meal, right in the castle of some former German baron."

On Duty in Guam.

Something of the life of a marine on duty in the Island of Guam is told in a letter from Corp. Fred G. Taylor, who is stationed on this American insular possession in the South sea.

"When the last transport was here I had a very interesting excursion out to it on official business," Corporal Taylor writes. "A corporal and I went aboard to check the baggage of the 'homeward-bounders' and then waited several hours for the captain quartermaster of the vessel to return from a social affair on shore to sign the manifest. He failed to appear, so we ate a swell feed aboard and then returned by launch across the harbor in the moonlight, and back by auto through the coconut groves to town.

"The next morning we again visited the vessel, this time getting our business done and saying good-bye to our friends on the ship, bound for the Philippines and the States."

"Last Sunday another fellow and I took a hike out into the jungles, walking around one of the benches and climbing out onto the coral reef that guards the harbor, at low tide. We took some pictures and started back to town, after spying some of the most beautifully colored fish we had ever seen."

"We took a road that we thought led to the main road, but after several miles found we had discovered a deserted Spanish highway leading through the jungles. In a few minutes we found ourselves at the leper colony at one end of the island."

"There we saw the walls of an old Spanish prison and looked into the 'Devil's Punchbowl,' which is a construction in the ground about 20 feet across at the top and bottom, but bulging in the center and about 100 to 150 feet deep. Then we returned to town, took some pictures of native women collecting 'toddy,' the juice of the coconut tree, from which liquor is made, and returned to camp."

Lake That Disappears.

In Georgia, near Vladosta, there is a lake which disappears every three or four years and then comes back again, no matter what the weather is like. The lake is three miles long and three-quarters of a mile wide, with an average depth of 12 feet of water. There are natural subterranean passages beneath it, through which the water passes off. It takes two or three weeks to disappear, when a mammoth basin is left in its place, which furnishes a beautiful sandy beach. After a month or so the water begins to return, and then in a couple of weeks it is the same magnificent stretch of water as it was before.

Unfortunate, Wasn't it?

It was the same old story. He had got the wrong number on the telephone.

Only this time he received a shock. "I'm sorry I gave you the wrong line," said a sweet voice over the wire. "It doesn't matter a bit," he replied, not to be outdone in courtesy. "I'm sure the number you gave me was much better than the one I asked for; but it just happened that I wasn't able to use it."

Couldn't Work

S. W. Bishop Was Laid Up By Kidney Trouble. Now Owes Good Health to Doan's.

"I owe my present good health, large to Doan's Kidney Pills," says S. W. Bishop, 5102 Kensington Ave., St. Louis, Mo. "I wasn't able to work. Sharp pains would catch me when I stooped or tried to lift anything, and at night the kidney secretions passed frequently and were scanty and painful. Spots seemed to be before my eyes and I would get dizzy. There was a painless under my eyes. I could see myself failing from day to day and I finally was laid up from June until September. I got Doan's Kidney Pills and used them. I received relief with the first box and became stronger every day. I could sleep well at night and the kidney secretions were now of natural color. The dizziness and other troubles disappeared and I picked up in weight. After I had used four boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills I looked and felt like my old self. The cure seemed a miracle and I firmly believe that my life was saved by this remedy."
