DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

CAMPBELL CAMEL CHATS.

"Well, folks, I'm glad to see you at the zoo. In the water there aren't so many of you, but those who've come are very nice, indeed. I have no objection in the least to any I see. No objection.

"Of course," Campbell Camel continued, "if anyone should ask me why I have no objection I wouldn't know. I'm not blessed with many brains.

"Although I'm not sure whether it is a blessing to have brains. Think what a trouble they would be. I'm so glad I'm stupid and dull and all such things which it's easy to be.

"If I had brains I might cause myself an awful lot of trouble. And it isn't wise for any creature to cause themselves any more trouble than is necessary—especially so when they want to spend most of their time idly chewing.

"To be sure I will carry grown-ups on my back. I will do that obligingly, and other loads, too, including children and packages.

"But I am most extremely glad about the brains and that I have so few.

"Why, if I had brains," Campbell Camel continued, "I would have to take them out at night and put them to bed and maybe sing them to sleep. And in the morning I'd have to wash their faces and smooth their hair and everything like that. I'd have to brush their teeth, perhaps. It's quite a fashionable thing to do and I suppose I should follow the fashion about this.

"And they might want to hear stories, funny stories and sad stories, which would make them weep so they'd have to use their handkerchiefs.

"I'd have to get them handkerchiefs, too. That would be a nuisance. I'd have to go to a shop for them and folks in the shop mightn't like to see me. They mightn't wait on me and then I'd have to hold my head high, walk out of the shop and go all about until I found one where they would do what I wished.

"I'm Glad to See You."

"And then I'd have to send my brains to school so they could improve. Folks with brains are always improving their brains you see.

"That would mean I'd have to buy my brains books and pencils and slates and copybooks and every other thing imaginable.

"Oh dear, oh dear, how sad that would be. And I'd have to go to the teacher and ask her how my brains were getting along and if they were going to be advanced to the next grade before the end of the term and if they stood good chances of passing their examinations."

"I've been listening to your talk," said Charlie Camel, "and I'm sure I knew we were a foolish lot, but you're the worst of the whole family."

"How so?" said Campbell Camel.

"Well," said Charlie, "in the first place, all brains are in your head—I don't mean they are in your head, but they are in the heads of those who have them.

"I agree with you they're a great nuisance but they don't have to be taken out and sent to school and all those things you said.

"Why you are the most foolish camel I've ever seen, and that is saying a good deal, for I've been constantly with you for years—myself.

"But you, poor dear Campbell Camel, didn't even know what brains were—not really!"

"But anyway I'm glad I haven't them."

"So am I," said Charlie.

"I can boast about some things. I don't want to stop for a drink of water every five minutes the way some folks do. I can go on long trips where water is hard to find—in the great desert—and I never cause anyone any trouble. Neither do you, of course, Charlie," added Campbell.

"Pounds and pounds can we carry," said Charlie. "Who wants brains, when we are so useful?"

"We don't want them, at any rate," said Campbell.

"And most assuredly your wish is gratified, for you haven't one, dear Campbell. You're as stupid as a camel can be, and that is, oh, so very stupid!"

"I consider that a great compliment," said Campbell.

"So do I," said Charlie. "Such a compliment is fine for a camel, for it is nice to feel one succeeds in what one tries to be—and in our case it is to be stupid."

"DANDERINE" PUTS BEAUTY IN HAIR

Girls! A mass of long, thick, gleamy tresses

Let "Danderine" save your hair and double its beauty. You can have lots of long, thick, strong, lustrous hair. Don't let it stay lifeless, thin, scraggly or fading. Bring back its color, vigor and vitality.

Fly's Frugality.

OUT O' LUCK

Never mind! Just take Cascarets if Bilious, Constipated

Everyone must occasionally give to the bowels some regular help or else suffer from constipation, bilious attacks, stomach disorders and sick headache. But do not whip the bowels into activity with harsh cathartics.

What the liver and bowels need is a gentle and natural tonic, one that can constantly be used without harm. The gentlest liver and bowel tonic is "Cascarets." They put the liver to work and cleanse the colon and bowels of all waste, toxins and poisons without griping—they never sicken or inconvenience you like Calomel, Salts, Oil or Purgatives.

Twenty-five million boxes of Cascarets are sold each year. They work while you sleep. Cascarets cost so little too.—Adv.

A Feeling of Security

You naturally feel secure when you know that the medicine you are about to take is absolutely pure and contains no harmful or habit producing drugs.

Such a medicine is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, kidney, liver and bladder remedy. The same standard of purity, strength and excellence is maintained in every bottle of Swamp-Root.

It is scientifically compounded from vegetable herbs.

It is not a stimulant and is taken in teaspoonful doses.

It is nature's great helper in relieving and overcoming kidney, liver and bladder troubles.

A sworn statement of purity is with every bottle of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root.

If you need a medicine, you should have the best. On sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to try this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

RUB RHEUMATIC PAIN FROM ACHING JOINTS

Stop "dosing" Rheumatism.

It's pain only; not one case in fifty requires internal treatment. Rub soothing, penetrating "St. Jacobs Oil" right on the "tender spot," and by the time you say Jack Robinson—out comes the rheumatic pain and distress. "St. Jacobs Oil" is a harmless rheumatism liniment which never disappears and doesn't burn the skin. It takes pain, soreness and stiffness from aching joints, muscles and bones; stops sciatica, lumbago, backache and neuralgia.

Limber up! Get a small trial bottle of old-time, honest "St. Jacobs Oil" from any drug store, and in a moment, you'll be free from pain, aches and stiffness. Don't suffer! Rub rheumatism away.—Adv.

REFUGE SPOTS FOR ELOPERS

Fleet Prison and Gretna Green Were Highly Desirable Places in the Olden Time.

Gretna Green, whose chief industry was once matrimony, is a village in Scotland less than a mile from the River Sark, which marks the English-Scottish boundary line in that vicinity, near the Solway firth. The English marriage laws sent eloping couples to Scotland just as the divorce laws of 47 of our states make Reno desirable for would-be divorcees, and therein lies Gretna Green's first claim to fame.

Fleet prison was the figurative "Gretna Green" of England until the passage of the famous Hardwicke act of 1754, which made unauthorized marriages voidable. Gretna Green thereupon becoming the romance spot of the British isles. All the Scottish law required was that two persons should declare their intention to be married in the presence of witnesses, and the British law then, as now, recognizes marriages as legal so long as they conformed to the laws in the places where they were performed.

During the three decades when Gretna Green flourished, there were more than 7,000 marriages recorded there, nearly 800 of which were performed in 1855, the year before Scotland enacted a law which made a three weeks' residence a requisite to marriage. Marriage by declaration is still legal in Scotland.

BE THANKFUL YOU CAN SMELL

English Woman Writer Went Through Life Keenly Regretting Her Lack of That Sense.

Did it ever occur to you to be grateful for the sense of smell? Probably not, and yet those who have been deprived of it have felt their loss keenly. Harriet Martineau, the famous English writer, lacked the sense of smell and consequently the sense of taste, which depends on smell. Once and only once she tasted in all the intensity of flavor a slice of a leg of mutton. The sense came to her suddenly and she thought and hoped it had come to stay.

"I was going out to a great dinner that night," she said when telling of her own taste, "and I looked forward with great eagerness to the dainties that I knew would be set before me. How I should enjoy practicing my new-found sense of taste!"

But, alas, the sense of taste disappeared as suddenly as it had come, and never returned, and she went through life remembering that taste of roast mutton as one of her keenest joys.

Could See Resemblance.

In a downtown store the other day a woman stood near the cash desk very proudly and proudly showing off a little baby girl, of whom the exhibitor quite obviously was an aunt.

The child's effectiveness consisted mainly of its head-dress and a cluster of rich golden curls. An admiring group soon gathered around, while the woman pointed out the baby's finer points of beauty, concluding with the rather far-fetched statement that "Everybody says she looks just like me!" The woman, busy talking, did not notice that the child had become restive and was tugging with both hands at the ribbons which fastened the dainty cap on her head, and suddenly the knot was untied, and off came the cap. And off came the curls, too, which were fastened to the cap, leaving the baby as bald as the floorwalker who stood grinning nearby. There was a moment of charitable silence, and then someone in the crowd turned away with the remark: "Well, she does look a good deal like the old lady, at that."—Kansas City Star.

Canals.

A suggestion made by a Londoner that the bed of the Forth and Clyde canal should be converted into a highway of traffic has not been received north of the Tweed with the indignation that might have been expected. The Glasgow Herald says the notion is not so extravagant as it might appear. The swift progress of motor transport threatens the railways, and it can scarcely fail to affect the position of the canals in industrial and commercial economy. The canal belongs to those leisurely periods of the world's history which saw Egypt and China at their apogee. It was, it is interesting to remember, in the fifteenth century, a time of development if ever there was, that canal engineering received its great impetus in the Western world owing to the discovery of the "lock" system. England applied the new idea with such thoroughness that her canal system became second, probably, only to that of Holland.

Accident Policy's Limit.

If a man die of blood poisoning as the result of giving himself a hypodermic injection, his family can collect nothing on his accident insurance policy. For the possession of a hypodermic needle is a violation of the New York public health law, Article 11A; therefore the man commits a crime and dies as the result. This was decided by the appellate division in a recent case.

HEAD STUFFED FROM CATARRH OR A COLD

Says Cream Applied in Nostrils Opens Air Passages Right Up.

Instant relief—no waiting. Your clogged nostrils open right up; the air passages of your head clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffing, blowing, headache, dryness. No struggling for breath at night; your cold or catarrh disappears.

Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic, healing cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothes the inflamed or swollen mucous membrane and relief comes instantly. It's just fine. Don't stay stuffed up with a cold or nasty catarrh.—Adv.

QUEUE IS SIGN OF BONDAGE

Remarkable That Chinese Have Come to Look Upon It With a Degree of Pride.

If the Germans had won the war, would they have made us wear pig-tails—in order that they might have something to yank us around by. And would they have applied their efficiency to a new system of punishment, perhaps with a different number of yanks for each offense against our conquering masters? The zeal with which patriotic Chinamen cultivate the queues that they consider a sort of national distinction, and the fact that those Chinamen in other countries who discard them are forever considered outcasts is indeed paradoxical. For the pigtail is a sign of bondage, the earmark of a conquered race. Centuries ago ancient China had a civilization all its own. But on every side she was surrounded by warrior hordes that coveted the riches and luxuries of the more advanced people and harassed them continually. Finally overcome by a barbarian host, the Chinese were reduced to a state of servility. One of the exactions of the conquerors was that the men grow long queues, by which, as they flew by on their horses, they actually took hold of the helpless creatures to swing them before them to the saddle or to cut off their heads.

BELIEF IN "LUCKY PIECE"

Superstition That Seems More Real Now Than in the Days Before the Great War.

"That is my lucky piece," a man said, as he pulled a shapeless lump of metal out of his pocket with regular small change. "That's a let that just grazed my ear and moved into a wall right behind my head." He laughed. "Six months ago I was in the hospital from another bullet hit next day. . . . But I married a nurse, and she's a bit of good to you bet! I got into the habit of carrying a pocket piece of some kind, whether they believe in luck or not." One man always carries a dollar in an inside pocket by itself, that if his spending pocket happens to get empty he would not be altogether destitute. There is another fellow who carries a $10 bill in the top pocket of every pair of trousers he buys, that way he can never have the lack of forgetting to change his money when he changes his clothes. "He might have the bad luck to forget to remove it when he sent the messengers to be pressed, but—as he philosophically expresses it—that was good luck for the tailor."
