WATERPOWER BILL SIGNED BY WILSON

New Law Releases Power for Great Indnstrial Development.

Washington.—The waterpower bill passed by congress just before adjournment has been signed by President Wilson.

Accompanying the announcement was a statement that the president had acted after being advised by the attorney general that adjournment of congress had not deprived him of the 10 days allowed by the constitution for the consideration of a measure.

The new law releases power for almost unlimited industrial development in this country and is considered one of the most important laws enacted during the sixty-sixth session.

By its terms a commission composed of the secretary of war, secretary of agriculture and secretary of the interior is authorized to lease waterpower rights on all public lands, forest reservations, Indian reservations and on navigable streams for terms not exceeding 50 years. At the end of the lease period the government has the option of taking over the plants that have been built at an appraised valuation or re-leasing or of leasing to some other concern.

In addition to the waterpower bill the president signed several minor measures but not the resolution repealing wartime legislation and the Underwood bill creating a commission to take up the print paper and pulp wood question with Canada.

MANY GENERALS ARE GIVEN LOWER RANK

Washington.—Under a war department order, twenty-three officers holding the emergency rank of major generals are reduced to brigadiers or colonels and sixteen officers now brigadier generals are reduced to ranks ranking from major to colonel.

Prominent in the list of major generals reduced are Clarence R. Edwards, who commanded the New England national guard division overseas, and who is now commander of the Northeastern department at Boston, and Henry T. Allen, commander of the American forces in Germany, who revert to their rank of brigadiers.

Others reduced to brigadiers are Major Generals Omar Bundy, who commanded a fighting division in France, and who is now in charge of Camp Lee, Va.; Charles T. Monoher, director of the air service; William S. Graves, who commanded the American forces in Siberia; William M. Wright, acting chief of staff in the absence of General March in Europe, and Samuel D. Sturgis, commanding at Camp Sherman, O.

M'ADOO REFUSES TO BE A CANDIDATE

New York.—William G. McAdoo issued a statement in which he refused to permit his name to go before the democratic convention at San Francisco.

McAdoo reiterated that his reason for leaving Washington was that he decided to "rehabilitate his family" and that the time has not come when he can conscientiously give his services to his party. He declared that he cannot afford a presidential campaign, should he be nominated, and that he would not wish his friends to furnish funds.

"This decision," he said, "is irrevocable, as the path of duty seems to me clear and unmistakable."

His decision was made known in a telegram to Jouett Shouse, democratic delegate-at-large from Kansas, who had telegraphed Mr. McAdoo that sentiment throughout the country was rapidly crystallizing in his favor; that his friends would like to have him permit presentation of his name to the convention, and that they were certain he could be nominated and elected.

The delegates to the Hythe conference, it is declared, were of the opinion that the taking of these measures would be sufficient to deal with the situation.
