Dentist, Given Emergency Toothache Treatment, Orders Further Order of a Session in the Chair.

A haggard-faced man rushed into the Park Emergency hospital shortly after 3 o'clock a few mornings ago.

"For the love of God will you give me something to stop a raving toothache? It's had me up all night, and I've tried everything," he moaned to the steward in attendance.

The steward made the pain-ridden patient comfortable in a chair and then applied soothing remedies to the offending molar.

"Why, the pain's gone," the patient exclaimed after a while.

"Well, that tooth won't bother you any more for a while, but you had better see a dentist in the morning," said the steward.

"Guess I'll have to," said the patient gloomily.

"Everybody hates to go to a dentist," remarked the steward. "Will you give me your name for our records?"
"Yes," said the patient. "I am Dr.
A. Karageorge."

"Are you a physician?" asked the steward.

"No, I'm a dentist," smiled the patient. "I have cured scores and scores of aching teeth, but this one of mine sure unnerved me. Guess I'll have to go to a dentist in the morning. Gee, I hate to."—San Francisco Chronicle.

Hearing of Butterflies

The hearing of certain butterflies, the myths and the spiders has been a subject of much study by F. H. H. H., whose results have been reported in a Berlin zoological annual. The seat of hearing is found to be the "tympanal organ" of the last ring of the thorax. The air-filled vesicle or bladder of this organ adjoins two very thin spots in the articular chitin, and one of these is the true drumhead, connected with a nerve strand having two sensory cells, while the other, the so-called opposite drumhead, seems to serve as a sounding board to reinforce vibrations. Experiments with crickets have shown that the chirping of the male is heard only by females having the tympanal organ intact. The organ of the butterfly, which is more sensitive, cannot be tested in the same way, but response has been had to very high, shrill tones, such as that made by rubbing a cork against a wet glass, and in one species to a chattering sound made by the wings of the male. Butterflies flying by day seem to have hearing organs more generally than those that are active at night.

Snap Eruption Ten Yards Away.

An unnerving but fruitful incident occurred recently as the volcano of Kilauea, H. I., described as the most continuously active in the world, was being examined by scientists of the Hawaiian Volcano Research association. At the climax of this expedition they had determined to photograph a towering crag of solidified lava that rises, Gibraltar-like, from the surface of a swelling, overcrusted lava lake, declares an illustrated article in Popular Mechanics Magazine.
But at the instant the cameraman was squeezing the bulb, an explosion with in the uneasy mass threw into the air not ten yards from the party, and directly before the lens of the camera, a tumbling mass of white hot lava crashing back, and so breaking the surface crust, these erupted fragments rouled the entire lake into a "boiling bellowing mass of foam."

Slight Mistake.
Absent minded professor (halfway through the service)—I thought there was something wrong. This is not the girl I want to marry.—From "Karkaturen," Christiania, Norway.
