PREVENT LOSSES IN SHIPPING HAY

Invoices Should Precede Car and Contain Full Details Concerning Consignment.

FOLLOW INSTRUCTIONS GIVEN

Exact Weight of Hay and Number of Bales in Car Should Be Stated on Bill of Lading, Together With Its Grade.

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Careless and inaccurate billing or inolding are responsible for much of the delay and losses experienced by hay shippers, says the bureau of markets and crop estimates, United States Department of Agriculture. Accordingly the bureau has prepared the following suggestions that apply to the shipment of grain as well as hay:

Follow billing instructions in detail. naming route and delivery road when Forward bills of lading and invoices promptly.

Prepare involces carefully, stating car initial and number, date of shipment, number of bales, total weight of car, or of each particular kind or grade, and price data when available. Follow Instructions Closely.

If the billing instructions furnished by the consignee are not clear, it is generally a better plan to hold the shipnient until satisfactory instructions are received than to take the chance of billing it incorrectly. When specific instructions as to routing or delivery are given they should be followed in detail, as It is frequently the case that shipments arriving over roads other than those specified must be switched at considerable cost before delivery can be made at the desired location. In many markets hay shipments arriving in certain railroad yards will not sell as advantageously as when they arrive in other yards because of unfavorable switching facilities or because of the distance of the yards from buyer's warehouses. Commission merchants and dealers in the markets are familiar with these factors and, when possible, request billing that will not subject their hay shipvents to these handicaps.

Buyers may also desire to reconsign their hay upon arrival or change the billing while the car is in transit; but if the hay is shipped via another line from which they cannot reconsign the shipment, they may suffer a considerable loss which can be charged back to the shipper, if he has not followed shipping instructions.

Forward Bill of Lading Promptly. When the bill of lading has been signed by the railroad agent it should be forwarded promptly to the consignee, unless it is desired to attach a draft to it, in which case it should be placed in the bank for transmittal to he consignee at the earliest possible

When cars are shipped only a short distance, and especially if billed to shipper's orders, the bank should be directed to forward the draft and bill of lading direct to consignee's bank, if known; otherwise to a bank in his town. If this precaution is not aken the bank may follow its usual custom of sending the documents through the regular channel of corresponding banks, which may delay deivery to the consignee until after the car of hay has arrived and been placed on demurrage.

In addition to careful and accurate routing of the shipment, the exact weight of the hay and the number of bales loaded into the car should be stated on the bill of lading, and it is also a good practice to state the kind and grade of hay comprising the ship-

Making the Invoice.

When a car of hay is consigned to a dealer in a distant market a letter to him stating that a car of hay is being shipped is not sufficient information upon which he can arrange to the best advantage for its arrival and sale, Whether a car is consigned or has been sold on track or to arrive a carefully prepared invoice should be sent the consignee at the time the car is shipped. Such an invoice should show the car initial and number and date of shipment. Also the kind and quality of hay, together with the number of bales and the total weight. If two or more distinct kinds or grades have been loaded, the number of bales and the total weight of ach kind or grade should also be shown.

KNOWLEDGE ASSISTS IN SELLING TIMBER

Farmer Can Avoid Losses by Careful Study of Market.

Forest Service Offers Suggestions to Owners of Woodlands in Regard to Sale of Material of Highest Prices.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) Woodland owners often sell their timber without having a sufficient knowledge of its market value to protect their interests, and suffer loss in consequence. Losses can be avoided only by a careful and thorough study of all available markets. The following steps may be of assistance in acquiring a knowledge of the sale value of timber, says the forest service of the United States Department of Agelculture.

Take advantage of the experience of neighbors who have recently sold imber or have otherwise informed themselves in regard to good markets and current prices.

Apply to the state forester, the county agricultural agent, or any other available public official or personal agency for sources of information and advice regarding possible markets and timber prices.

Employ the services of some reliable man who has made a special study of market prices of logs and lumber. The saving gained thereby, unless the owner has had much experience clong that line, may amount to from 10 to 40 times the cost of the examination.

Get into touch, through correspondence, with outside buyers, and thus awaken competition among as many rospective purchasers as possible A live effort along this line will often bring about an open market for standing timber.

Determine the value of the material by reference to current market prices and the total cost of putting it on the market. Additional information concerning the selling of farm timber is contained in Farmers' Bulletin 1210, Measuring and Marketing Farm Timber, copies of which may be had free by addressing a request to the Division of Publications, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington,

ONIONS MUST BE WELL DRIED

Crop Should Be Thoroughly Cured Before They Are Placed in Storage, Says Department.

Onlons should be well ripened and thoroughly cured in the field, in drying sheds, or on slat trays before they are placed in storage, says the United States Department of Agriculture Decay and deterioration result from storage of immature, soft, or "thick-necked" onlons and from imperfect curing, bruising, or other injuries caused by improper methods of handling in harvesting and drying.

When in good condition for storage, onions are well cured, hard, free from oose skins or mechanical injuries caused by rough or careless handling. They should be stored in slatted onion crates or in shallow slatted bins, and should be cooled to a temperature of 32 to 36 degrees as quickly as possible after they are placed in storage.

It is best that they be placed in frost-proof, ventilated cellars, in wellinsulated storage houses above ground, or in cold-storage houses. In common storage houses adequate means of venilation should be provided for the quick cooling of the product and for maintaining a uniform temperature during the storing season.

INCREASED YIELDS OF CORN

Clear Gain of 8,000 Bushels Per Year by Ohio Farmer Who Followed Department Advice.

Records of one 800-acre farm in Ohio ow an annual increase of 8,000 bushels ef corn through the adoption of new strains of corn and improved methods developed and recommended by the United States Department of Agriculture. The farmer has been following the advice of the department for 20 years, and has kept careful records of his yield. For the last ten years the increase averages more than ten bushels an acre over previous years. Beyond the extra cost of harvesting, the labor and expense is no greater than previously, so the 8,000 bushels is regarded as clear gain.
