Continuous Grain Crop Bad.

"Outside the dry farm districts of Oregon continuous grain cropping is not a money-making enterprise," notes H. D. Scudler, farm management specialist at O. A. C. "The worn-out practice of unrotated grain growing holds down the labor income on Oregon farms. The selection of the enterprise is the biggest factor in determining profits.
Crops, livestock and fruit are most common in Oregon. Cash crops such as potatoes, clover, vetch and alfalfa are popular and usually successful. Pure seed grains have a limited sale.

Synopsis--Littering on the San Francisco water front, John Rainey, newspaper reporter, is accosted by a giant blind man, who assures him to lead him aboard the sailing schooner Karluk. In the cabin they find Captain Simms and a man named Carlsen. Simms recognizes the blind man, calling him Jim Lund. Lund accuses Simms of abandoning him, blind, on an ice flow, and denounces him. Simms denies the charge, but Lund refuses to be pacified. He declares his intention of accompanying the Karluk on its expedition north, where it is going in quest of a gold field which Lund has discovered.
Peggy, Simms' daughter, is aboard, and defends her father. Carlsen, who is a physician as well as a first mate, drugs Rainey. Awakening from his stupor, Rainey finds himself at sea. Carlsen informs him he has been kidnapped. He offers Rainey a share of the gold, and Rainey is forced to declare himself satisfied.
Lund gives him a brief account of a former expedition of the Karluk,

a former expedition of the Karluk,
field which Lund has discovered.
