Arcadia

Chester Lackey received word Saturday noon of the death of his grandfather, Mr. Lowsey of Ironside. He left immediately with his mother Mrs. Jim Lackey of Ontario. They reached Ironside at midnight Saturday. It was a long cold ride with a car on account of so much snow and the bad condition of the roads in the hills.

Mrs. E. B. Butler, Jr. and daughter, Miss Helen, went to Boise Tuesday to attend the funeral of Mrs. Butler's brother, Jim Len, of that place.

Several from this place had an Easter picnic near the Burr ranch on Snake river. Dinner was served on the ground and a very enjoyable time was reported by all. Those who went were Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Bullard, Misses Tiddy and Ethel Bullard, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Oris, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Long and little son, John Van derpool and little son, Mr. and Mrs. J. Lackey and children, Miss Elsie Poole and Hiram VanDyke.

Another picnic party, all young people, went to Mitchell Butte. Those in this crowd were the Misses Mary, Lillian and Bertha Dail, Lizzie and Leona Zitterkob, Addie Smith and Cereil Dearborn, John and Jacob Zittercob, George Smith.

The Campfire Girls went for a hike and camping trip Friday, returning Saturday evening. Camp was pitched near Snake river and the evening was spent by the brave girls in telling ghost stories by the campfire. Those who went were Tiddie and Ethel Bullard, Bertha Dail, Mildred Long, Leona Zittercob, Helen Clement, the Misses Dearborn and Poole, who acted as chaperon.

Elbert Butler Jr., will start six men setting out 40 acres of prunes on his ranch this week.

There has been a big loss of young pigs in this community on account of the cold weather.

Mrs. John Smith has been quite sick for several days.

Bryan Cooper and family were visiting Jack Guffey and family near Nysa Saturday.

J. Mackey is putting out 100 acres of the 200 acre Hunt ranch in corn. The corn will be used to fill the two large silos on the ranch.

Miss Poole is typing the last edition of the Arcadia Yelper for this term.

Coda Butler is suffering with a nervous breakdown following the flu. He and his wife are at the home of Coda's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Butler.

Miss Elsie Poole took supper with Mrs. C. W. Barrett Monday night.

Coal Should Be Less Wastefully Mined

The United States has so far utilized less than one per cent, of the available coal supply, according to this month's publication of the MALHEUR COUNTY BANK. The Bank's folder "Keep the Home Fires Burning" states that the United States produces over one-half of all the coal mined in the world. Although it is estimated that less than one per cent, has so far been used the Bank points out that our rate of increase in the use of coal has been such that it is absolutely imperative that the tremendous reserves remaining be less wastefully mined. The many illustrations in the folder picture the most improved methods of mining.

In Europe peat is used extensively but in the United States there are, it is estimated, over one hundred and thirty billion tons awaiting the genius who can put this resource to practical use. Nature has singularly enough seen to it that peat does not coincide with our coal deposits.

No Longer a Shortage of Teachers

That the shortage of teachers, which became so acute during and shortly after the war, is a thing of the past as far as numbers is concerned is well shown by bureau of education statistics. That the shortage has been made good at the expense of quality of the teaching force is stated by Federal Commissioner of Education J. J. Tigert. He believes that vigorous methods must be used to raise the standard of education and training required of teachers.

DANTE'S INFERNO OUTDONE IN ARMENIA

Walls of Starving Children Assault the Ears of Relief Workers at Erivan.

The tragic progression of famine conditions in Armenia is strikingly shown in the personal reports brought back by State Director J. J. Handsaker of the Near East Relief when he visited that section last August, and in the letters that have been received at intervals since.

"When I was there in the late summer," said Mr. Handsaker, "The conditions were truly appalling, despite the fact that the orphanages were filled to their utmost capacity and everything possible was being done. I myself selected a little naked girl with nineteen others from among hundreds of starving children to fill the only possible vacancies in the orphanage at Erivan at that time. However, the weather was warm, and the refugees could manage in some way to keep alive. Reports from Erivan in late September told of the coming of the cold weather, and how the reserves were drawn upon for the opening of additional soup-kitchens. Starving men women and children from all sections were flocking desperately to the Near East Relief stations in the hope of getting work, food and clothing. Two months later, under date of Nov. 29, we have news of the frightful situation that followed. This news came to Dr. Esther Lovejoy, of Portland, Oregon, who is national chairman of the American Women's Hospitals, from Dr. Mabel Elliott, in charge of the Near East section. This organization is co-operating with the Near East Relief, and is handling the medical work of the latter at Erivan. Below is an excerpt from Dr. Mabel Elliott's letter to Dr. Lovejoy:

"I cannot begin to tell you, doctor, of the misery here in spite of the enormous amount of work being done. Since I have been here 82 is the lowest number of cases we have had in our hospitals at any one time, and yet they are dying on all corners of the city. Last Sunday we went out on horseback to see how things were beyond the town; we passed a dead horse by the side of the road, and three wretched human beings were sitting beside it, taking the flesh off with their hands. It was a most repulsive sight.

"All day long you can hear the groans and wails of little children outside our building in hopes we can and will pick them up. If the sun shines for a little while they quiet down, and then when it rains they begin again. One day the rain turned into snow and it was awful to listen to them. The note of terror that came into the general wail was distinctly perceptible, although my room was upstairs and the window was closed. They will know what a single night out in the snow would mean to them. We are picking them up as fast as possible.

"You can see by my report how many more patients we have than beds, and the same holds good in the orphanages. There is no use crowding them in so that they will all die."

PRETTY OREGON BRIDE MOTHERS 2000 ORPHANS

Mrs. Ethel Long Newman, Oregon Agricultural College, 1920, who is now in charge of a Near East Relief orphanage in Armenia. She mothers her family of 2,000 little war victims while her husband runs a 20,000-acre farm which is a part of the constructive work being done in Russian Armenia by the Near East Relief.

XX. HAPHAZARD EXTENSION

The Department of Agriculture is one instance of how governmental establishments grow and spread and extend their activities, once they get started. The bureau of fisheries, in the Department of Commerce, is another. It had a modest beginning, and not so very long ago. Prior to 1871 there was no branch of the federal government especially charged with the consideration of fishery affairs.

Several of the states had established fish commissions and these state authorities, supported by private interests, began to agitate for a national bureau devoted to fishery interests. So it came about that by 1871 congress was ready to yield and begin to make appropriations. The first one was for $5,000 and provided for a commissioner of fish and fisheries to prosecute investigations and inquiries, "with the view of ascertaining whether or any and what diminution in the number of food fishes of the coast and in the lakes of the United States has taken place; and also whether any and what protective, prohibitory or precautionary measures should be adopted in the premises; and shall report upon the same to congress."

The commissioner was to draw no pay, for it was provided by congress in the same joint resolution that he should be a civil officer of the government, of proved scientific and practical acquaintance with the fishes of the coast, who should serve without additional compensation. The then assistant secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, by name Spencer Fullerton Baird, was chosen as the best man for the job, and so he proved to be. He made the little acorn grow. He was industrious and competent and knew how to get along with congress. He was diligent and he stood before kings. See what happened.

Remember, he started out with $5,000 to discover whether there had been any diminution of the supply of food fishes along the coasts or in the lakes. He was at the head of an independent investigation and reported directly to congress. The thing was kept alive by annual appropriations as an independent institution until 1903, when it was incorporated into the newly formed Department of Commerce and Labor as the bureau of fisheries.

By 1909 the annual appropriation had grown to $803,920, and the bureau had a permanent personnel of 325. At that time the land owned and occupied by the bureau at its fish cultural and biological stations had an aggregate area of over 12,000 acres, with a value of $240,000. The improvements and equipment at these stations represented an investment of more than $1,000,000. Other property of the bureau at that time included four sea-going steam and sail vessels, 20 steam launches and 150 small sail, power and rowboats, with equipment had a value of $300,000. Its six fish-transportation cars were valued at $45,000. Indeed, the total investment of the government in fishery-service property ran to about $1,585,000. That was back in 1909.

Well, it hasn't stopped growing; bigger and busier than ever, as the advertisements say. The appropriation by congress for the fiscal year 1919 was $1,183,140, and for 1921, $1,207,110. Besides what congress gave, the President allotted in 1915 and 1919, out of his private fund "for the national security and defense," $150,000. With the years of its growth and increasing funds the bureau had taken on many new functions and activities.

Until recently the bureau was administering to the best of its ability the laws relating to the terrestrial and arboreal fur bearers of Alaska, but the duty was incongruous to its legitimate functions. Congress finally conceded that the pursuit of foxes does not constitute a fishery. The cultivation of minks cannot be successfully conducted in a fish hatchery.

Apparently, as so many other establishments under the executive branch have, the fisheries service had become all cluttered up with duties and jobs it is not fitted or equipped to handle.

All of which is a long, long way from an investigation of the possible diminution of food fish along the coast.

I don't pretend to say of the fisheries bureau that it has performed inefficiently either its proper work or the added activities that have been imposed upon it. For all I know it may be and is a great national blessing, and managed with maximum skill, intelligence and real economy. I hope it is.

I cite it here only as an example of a branch of governmental activity that has grown up haphazard from a small beginning to be a great, costly, far-spreading enterprise that by its own confession is overlaid with duties, functions and activities unrelated to its legitimate and essential business—the care, propagation and study of all manner of food fish.

The Cost of Rotting Buildings now running into millions

A ROTTING building is absolute waste, because a small investment in paint will save it. A building that is not protected by paint must either be rebuilt or repaired in a few years at a costly figure.

Check the costs. Compare the prices of paint and lumber. Can you afford to bear the expense of rebuilding or repairing your home, when to save it costs so little?

When you paint, make an additional saving by using the best paint. It spreads easily—saves labor cost. It covers more surface per gallon than "cheap" paint.

But more important, the best paint serves five or more years longer than "cheap" paint.
