The BULL'S EYE

Editor and General Manager
WILL ROGERS

Another "Bull" Durham advertisement by Will Rogers, Ziegfeld Follies and screen star, and leading American humorist. More coming. Watch for them.

The BULL'S EYE is a publication that goes to print. When does it go to print? It goes to print when ever there is something to print. A lot of papers, in fact to be exact, all of them, have a certain time to be issued, regardless of the news. If nothing has happened that day or that week they have to come out just the same. They want you to pay for them whether they are any good to you or not. Why should a paper be printed if there is nothing new to print?

Sing Sing don't electrocute a man at a certain hour every day. They wait until they get a good man and then electrocute him. They don't have a set time or custom, and that is the way the BULL'S EYE is operated. We don't go to press at ten o'clock tonight just because we want to press at ten last night. No, sir! We wait until we have something that is worth while to our myriads of readers. We get them accustomed to the fact that when they see the BULL'S EYE, they say to themselves, "The BULL has seen something worth while," and that is why the Paper is out today. Because it has news for you.

We saw a man smoking a sack of "BULL" DURHAM and he was getting so much satisfaction out of it that we feel it our duty to tell those that never used "BULL" DURHAM just how they too can get satisfaction.

Will Rogers

P.S. Remember, you won't see us again until we have something worth while.

P.P.S. There is going to be another piece in this paper soon. Look for it.

In this week's issue Mr. Chapman attempts to show where Cain got his wife. With his characteristic sublime disregard of facts he says: "There was, without doubt, a sufficient number of persons to account for the building of not one city only, but of many." What we would like Mr. Chapman to explain is where did those people come from, if Genesis be true? According to Genesis, up to the time of Cain's exile there had been only two births in the Adam family—Cain and Able. Yet it seems from the account that Cain went off and got married in a short time. And not only that, but Cain complained to the Lord that "everyone that findeth me shall slay me." This shows that there must have been many people in the world at that time, when according to the Genesis account there were only three. It must be remembered that Adam was less than 130 years old at the time of Cain's exile, which is proved by the fact that Adam was only 130 years old when Seth was born, which interesting event occurred when Adam was 130. The sons and daughters that, according to the account, Adam begat were born during the 890 years that Adam lived after the birth of Seth.

It is obviously very improbable, not to say impossible, for a civilization, such as is indicated by Cain's remark about being slain, to have grown up in the hundred years or so from Adam's creation to Cain's exile, even allowing that the Genesis account is incomplete and that there were daughters born during that time that are not mentioned.

There is no way, without a total disregard of facts, to show where Cain got his wife if we accept the Genesis story as true.

Shakespearean Character

Monarcho, half-witted Italian, who claimed to be "King of All the World," was a well-known character in London in the sixteenth century. He is the original of Armado in Shakespeare's "Love's Labor Lost."

Where Did Cain Get His Wife?

And finally, out of the night of the Journal's shameful unbelief, comes the old, old question of Cain's wife—in this question "was it scientific for Cain to go off and get married when, if Genesis be true, there was only one woman in the world at that time?" A rapidly increasing population seems to be exactly what was intended in the very first words ever uttered by God to Adam, "Be fruitful and multiply." In any case it will be seen that there was, without doubt, a sufficient number of persons to account for the building of not one city only, but of many; easy to understand the necessity of the establishment of various branches of trade; and that there were now plenty of women to provide a wife for Cain, who doubtless married one of his sisters (for Adam begat sons and daughters) or possibly a niece—just as Abraham married his sister Gen. 20:12; against which there was then no law. I have now by the aid of Mr. Collett, Bishop Watson, et al., proven, I think, that Moses wrote the Pentateuch, as I started out to do; and answered the questions submitted to me up to the time when the Journal "blue pencilled" my letter of the 15th ultimo, and printed, in the issue of the 19th of February the minor part of the letter, the other being, by far, the most interesting, relevant and material.

I close with this letter, unless the Journal relents, and published the blue-pencilled portion of that letter. In conclusion, I beg to state that I appreciate the kindness shown by the Journal, having only the one occasion of complaint. I have felt it wise and within propriety to write much at length because not all us have access to books and, perhaps, the leisure for examination, hoping thereby to afford any such some pertinent, accurate information from men of learning and of faith.

This letter, together with my letter of the 6th instant—unpublished I believe brings me to the end of my task, unless the Journal by the publication of what and all that I have submitted desires to continue the correspondence. I am somewhat of the opinion, however, that if the Journal, whom I count my good friend, will kindly give its readers ALL I have furnished, the case better be submitted to readers with our mutual hope and prayer that good may come out of it.

Discovery of Brazil

Brazil, the largest of the South American countries, was discovered on January 23, 1500, by Vincent Pinzon. A Portuguese named Pedro Alvarez de Cabral, driven upon its coast by a storm in April, 1500, called the region the Land of the Holy Cross, but it was subsequently named Brazil, on account of its red sand.

Stanfield Fighting to Develop Resources of Oregon.

the public lands by both small and large livestock raisers."

Stanfield for Port and Shipping

U. S. Senator McNary wired Bert Anderson, republican county chairman, of Jackson County, on May 4:

"Senator Stanfield, chairman of the Public Lands Committee, has conducted hearings and given much of his time to Oregon and California grant lands tax bill. I AM ASSISTING HIM IN EVERY WAY I CAN. I am busy assisting in the hearings before the Senate Commerce Committee on the attempted sale of the Oriental line by the shipping board to the Dollar interests. SENATOR STANFIELD IS ASSISTING ME IN EVERY WAY HE CAN."

Stanfield Comes to Rescure of the Farmer

The passage of the emergency tariff bill on May 27, 1921, placing protective duties on 23 of the principal farm products, was due largely to the insistent efforts of senator Stanfield.

On May 20, 1921, the Stanfield bill was introduced for financial relief of agricultural banks and loan companies, through the War Finance Corporation. The main features of this measure became law as a part of the Norris Bill August 24, 1921, and Oregon banks, trust and loan companies that serve agriculture received $6,696,000 under its terms.

Working for Oregon's Reclamation Projects

Senator Stanfield favors active continuation of the reclamation of Oregon's arid lands until every irrigable acre is reduced to cultivation and production. He is working in full accord with his colleague, Senator McNary, Chairman of the Senate Committee on Irrigation, and with Representative Sinnott, chairman of the same committee in the House, in reclamation legislation. The Oregon senators won out in their contention that financial aid to settlers should be provided by the Government and the Interior Department in March, 1926, agreed to use $500,000 of the reclamation fund for the purpose of making experimental loans to settlers on certain selected projects over a period of 3 years.

Stanfield's High Rank on Senate Committees Helps Oregon. It Would Take Years for a New Man to Attain His Rank in the Senate.
