Overwhelming Dad

Here it is, just as it was slipped the bunch. A certain South Idaho farmer had three eligible daughters. The first married and removed to Twin Falls, Idaho. After a time the old gentleman was informed he was the grandfather of twins—Twin Falls twins. Later another of the daughters married and removed to Three-Creek, Idaho. When the old man learned his Three-Creek, Idaho daughter was the mother of triplets he began to lean to superstition. His third daughter then advised him of her engagement, telling her daddy after the ceremony of her intention to remove from the home town, whereupon the fond parent cleared his throat and remarked: "It's all right, daughter, only please keep away from Thousand Springs.—Payette Enterprise.
