

Oklahoma Girl Strong as Boy

"Louise Alice was fretful, nervous and all run-down from whooping cough," says Mrs. F. J. Kolar, 1730 West 22nd St., Oklahoma City, Okla. "The little I could force her to eat wouldn't ever digest. She became underweight, sallow and weak. "Then I decided to try California Fig Syrup, and the results surprised me. Her bowels started working immediately, and in little or no time she was eating so she got to be a pest at the table, always asking us to pass things. Her weight increased, her color improved and she began to romp and play again like other children. Now she's the picture of health, and strong as a boy."

Pleasant-tasting, purely vegetable California Fig Syrup acts surely and quickly to cleanse your child's stomach and bowels of the souring waste that is keeping her half-sick, bilious, sallow, feverish, listless, weak and puny. But it's more than a laxative. It tones and strengthens the stomach and bowels so these organs continue to act normally, of their own accord. Over four million bottles used a year shows its popularity. Ask for it by the full name, "California Fig Syrup," so you'll get the genuine, endorsed by physicians for 50 years.

Levee Work

Man's first effort to control the Mississippi was by building levees. The first planters thus sought to protect their own plantations and passed the danger along to the next fellows. Gradually the levees were enlarged and extended until they now form a set of parallel banks long enough to reach from New York to Chicago. They have cost, so far, more than $250,000,000.

Large, Generous Sample of Old Time Remedy Sent Free to Every Reader of This Article

More than forty years ago, in a small way, good old Pastor Koenig began the manufacture of Pastor Koenig's Nerve, a remedy recommended for the relief of nervousness, epilepsy, sleeplessness and kindred ailments. The remedy was made after the formula of old German doctors. The sales were small at first, but soon increased, and another factory was added to meet the increasing demand. Today there are Koenig factories in the old world, and Pastor Koenig's Nerve is not only sold throughout the United States but in every land and clime.

The manufacturers want every reader of this free offer to try the old remedy at their expense. They will send a large, generous sample to every one who mentions this article.

Try it and be convinced. It will only cost you a postal to write for the large, generous sample.

FLASH: The Lead Dog. By GEORGE MARSH. Copyright by The Penn Publishing Co. W. N. U. Service

Up the wild waters of the unknown Yellow-Leg, on a winter's hunt, Journey Brock McCain and Gaspard Leroix, his French-Cree comrade, with Flash, Brock's puppy and their dog team, Brock's father had warned him of the danger of his trip. After several battles with the stormy waters they arrive at a fork in the Yellow-Leg. Brock is severely injured in making a portage and Flash leads Gaspard to the unconscious youth. The trappers race desperately to reach their destination before winter sets in.

It was all a strange game to the high-spirited Flash. At first, he strenuously resented being trussed about neck and ribs with a rawhide harness and lashed to a sled. And yet, his love for the master who firmly but gently, with much soothing talk into the hairy ears, insisted on his daily lesson, eased his fret. When Flash understood that it was a kind of game that they played together—this pulling of the trapping sled; that Brock always followed, ever ready with praise and encouragement—he outgrew his desire to turf round and look back, to lie down and roll, to make a fuss when a leg straddled a trace, or wildly bolt after every fresh game trail he crossed.

Week by week the generous fish and meat diet added weight and power to the puppy's massive frame, and now, in his superb double coat of slate-gray and white, he neared the fulfillment of the promise of his milk-tooth days. Of the team, Yellow-Eye, alone, outweighed him, and for weeks the two great dogs had never been left loose together. Already, in disputes over caribou tid-bits, Flash had quickly proved to both Silt-Ear and Kona that he was their master. With the mighty Yellow-Eye, king-dog of the mall team, and master of the sled-dogs at Hungry House, it would be different. Brock and Gaspard knew that a fight between these two great Ungavas would result in serious injury or death to one of both. Yet they realized that some day when Flash had grown to his full power and weight; some day in the spring, when the dogs were loose and alone, the two would fight it out. For by the law of the North a sled-team must have its king-dog or chief.

November, the freezing moon of Cree and Ojibwa, found the young hunters following their trap-lines over ridges and barrens reaching far to the south and west. On the water courses, where, in October, they had seen otter slides, beaver ponds and mink sign, their traps were set. So, through November, when the fur is extra prime because as yet unworn by the traveling of its owners, while the snow deepened and the ice "made" on lake and river, the boys followed their lines. Twice a week each hunter camped out in a lean-to erected on the far end of his trapping trails in a thicket on the south side of a ridge. And the fifty miles of traveling on each round with the light sled, which carried blankets, provisions and cooking outfit, soon broke Flash to the ways of trace and trail.

One day Brock and Flash were approaching the lean-to in the ridges to the west of the barrens, where he spent the night on each round of his traps. The track of a waterline near the trail led Brock to turn momentarily aside into the forest while Flash continued slowly with the sled toward the camp. Brock was examining the tracks of the caribou or Injun-devil, who had turned back, suspicious of the sled trail, when he heard Flash's angry challenge, followed by a snarl of rage.

Again the puppy's battle cry waked the still forest. Then there was a din as of maddened brutes fighting to the death. "Great Scott!" gasped the startled Brock, fearful for the safety of his dog, handclapped by sled and harness, in a fight with a timber wolf. There's a wolf in the trap and Flash has plied into him!

Plunging up the trail on snowshoes, Brock turned a bend to find his overturned sled with both traces snapped short off. Tearing his rifle from its skin case, he cocked it and ran on, his heart pounding with fear for the untired puppy he loved. "Give it to him, Flash!" he encouraged. "Fight him, boy!"

Crashing through a thicket of young spruce he found them battling to their shoulders in the deep snow; a great, grey timber-wolf, who had torn loose from the trap, his muzzle smeared with blood and saliva, and the Ungava puppy, one slate-grey shoulder gashed red from the snap of knife-like fangs. In and out they lunged, wolf and dog, hacking, tearing at each other's thick coated neck and shoulders, snarling savagely as they fought; time and again slipping in the uncertain footing of deep snow, to roll and flounder in a writhing mass of bodies, legs and snapping tusks. Brock rushed to the battle-mad beasts, seeking the chance to end the unequal fight with a rifle bullet, for the reckless Flash had challenged to a finish fight the craftiest and most ruthless foe of the forest world. Twice the excited boy attempted to line his sights and shoot, but the swiftly moving combatants made it too dangerous for the puppy. "Knock him down, Flash!" urged Brock, as the dog drove into the shoulder of his foe, sending him reeling, but, as he leaped for a drive at the throat, slipped and missed. Then, forgetting the cocked gun in his hands while he urged on his dog, Brock's heart suddenly stopped, as the husky sprawled helplessly to his shoulders in deep snow. In a flash, recovering his footing and bounding back, with bared fangs the wolf slashed downward on the exposed neck of the struggling puppy, opening a deep gash. With a sob the boy thrust his rifle forward to shoot, but in his lunge at the sprawling dog, the wolf had left his throat open to the jaws beneath him. As his fangs ripped the husky's neck, Flash's long canines snapped up an upward thrust on the exposed jugular. A twist and wrench of the Ungava's thick neck and his tusks met in the throat of his foe—a lunge of the powerful legs and the dog drove the struggling wolf to the snow, beneath him. Another wrench and tear at the throat, and the wolf snarl died. Grinning horribly, with blood-smeared jaws, as he gasped out his life through a ripped jugular, the great beast writhed beneath the conquering dog, his blood staining the snow. Then, with a convulsive quiver, he lay still. Trembling with battle lust, Flash snarled his hate as he shook and worried his dead foe. At last, satisfied, the wounded Ungava stood proudly erect over his kill, his thick tail curved above his back, and in the manner of his wolfish forbears howled his triumph and his challenge out across the frozen forest. On his knees, at the side of his dog, an overjoyed lad hugged the massive body. "The raw puppy had won his spurs. "You old son-of-a-gun, you! You killed him in fair fight! My Flash puppy" and with two great tears of emotion frozen on his wind-burned cheeks, Brock McCain poured into the pricked ear of his dog the incoherent love language which only a boy and a dog understand. The slashes in Flash's neck and shoulder were painful but not dangerous, still, if neglected, would soon stiffen in the increasing cold, crippling his forelegs. So, drawing his sled, for the wounded neck of the dog could not bear the collar, Brock hastened to the lean-to camp and started a fire to cook supper and heat water. First washing out the wounds, while Flash whimpered with pain as he licked the hands which hurt him, Brock then bandaged the puppy's neck and shoulders with strips from an extra shirt. But as he ate his supper of caribou stew, the boy's face grew grave. It would be days before the wounded puppy could travel the twenty miles back to camp, and the food on the sled would last them but two. It meant leaving the dog in camp and finding "deer." (TO BE CONTINUED.)

Mystery in Diamonds The bulk of fine diamonds is obtained from the hard bluish-green serpentine rock known as "blue ground" which is found in funnels or craters deep within the earth. The actual origin of the precious stone is mysterious. Chemically, it is similar to charcoal, to which it can be reduced by combustion, but its physical properties are entirely different. Volcanic changes are presumed to be associated with its formation.

TASTY FOODS

Croquettes are such tasty food and may be prepared beforehand, so that they require little attention at the last, or may even be reheated in the oven if preferred.

Chicken Croquettes.—Take three cupfuls of chopped chicken, one green pepper also chopped, one cupful of bread crumbs, three beaten eggs. Add seasoning to the mixture and form into balls. Roll in egg, dip into crumbs and fry in deep fat.

Tongue Bouchees.—The usual foundation for bouchees is a small slice of bread fried in butter, and as they are served cold they may be prepared hours before serving. After frying the bread cut into rounds or oblongs, lay on soft paper to absorb the fat.

Baked Lamb Cutlets.—Mix three chicken livers and cooked chicken breast to make one cupful, add one cupful of crumbs, five tablespoonfuls of cream, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt and a little pepper. Spread over the cutlets, place a thin slice of bacon on each, roll up and tie. Sprinkle with buttered crumbs and bake, basting frequently.

Sweetbread Salad.—Cook one pair of sweetbreads, cut into half-inch cubes and add the same amount of cubes of boiled tongue. Add a little aspic jelly and place on ice. Mash two hard-cooked egg yolks, add salt, pepper, mustard, one teaspoonful of sugar, one tablespoonful of olive oil, two tablespoonfuls of vinegar and four tablespoonfuls of thick cream. Serve over the meat on lettuce.

Lamb Patties.—Grind two pounds of shoulder of lamb. Form into cakes, wrap a strip of bacon around each and fasten with a toothpick. Fry in a hot pan, season when well seared and serve with pan gravy.

Honey Doughnuts.—Take two eggs, two tablespoonfuls of butter, one and one-half cupfuls of honey, one cupful of sour milk, one teaspoonful of soda, three cupfuls of flour, two teaspoonfuls of cream of tartar. Mix and chill before rolling. Doughnuts made with honey are light, soft and do not dry out as do those made with sugar.

Opportune Dishes. As chestnuts are so well liked, one always welcomes something different in chestnut dishes.

Chestnut Salad.—Boil three dozen large chestnuts for twenty minutes, then plunge into cold water and remove the thin brown skins. Cut into quarters, add salt and a dash of cayenne, four tart apples cut into dice, a little dark meat of a turkey or duck, two tablespoonfuls of chopped pickle and heap on lettuce. Serve with French dressing.

Chestnut Patties.—Beat one egg, add one cupful of confectioner's sugar and one cupful of ground chestnuts, five tablespoonfuls of flour and one teaspoonful of baking powder. Beat and drop by spoonfuls on baking sheets. Dust with sugar and cinnamon and bake in a hot oven.

Chestnut Pudding.—Cook in boiling water one pint of shelled chestnuts; when tender, drain, chill and remove the brown skins. Mash and put through a sieve. Beat one-fourth pound of sugar and four tablespoonfuls of butter. Add four beaten egg yolks, one-fourth pound of bread crumbs and the chestnut puree, one cupful of milk, the juice and grated rind of a lemon. Beat fifteen minutes. Fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites, turn into a buttered mold and steam forty-five minutes. Serve with cream and sugar.

Pennsylvania Spice Cake.—Beat to a cream one-half cupful of butter and one cupful each of brown and white sugar, add three well-beaten eggs, one-half cupful of sour milk with one teaspoonful of salt, the same of cloves and allspice, two cupfuls of seeded, chopped raisins. Drop by teaspoonfuls on a buttered baking sheet and bake in a moderate oven.

French Salad.—Take one can of drained peas, add one pint of finely cut celery, one cupful of blanched walnuts, one cupful of tart oranges. Toss lightly and garnish with celery leaves. Serve with mayonnaise.

Sugar Cookies.—Cream one-half cupful of shortening and one cupful of sugar. Beat one egg until light and add one-fourth cupful of milk. Add this to the sugar mixture with one-half teaspoonful of vanilla. Sift two cupfuls of flour with one teaspoonful of salt and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Add more flour if needed. Roll into rolls and place on ice.
