HOLDING OUR END UP

If the average citizen who is barely making ends meet would check himself up he might find some surprising facts connected with his affairs.

He would probably find, among other things that his difficulties spring principally from the ancient game of "keeping his end up;" in other words, in keeping pace with his neighbors.

This very important feature of our daily lives has been emphasized by the automobile. First, our neighbor purchases a Ford and we must do likewise—on the installment plan. Then before the flivver is paid for another friend invests in a more expensive car, so in order to keep up appearances we must take another plunge—probably go him a little better.

The same principle applies to a dozen other kinds of unnecessary expenses. We must belong to a lot of lodges, societies and clubs. Our Mary must go to an expensive boarding school, because Mrs. Green is sending her Sallie, when both of them would be better off in the home town high school.

We must not lag behind in the matter of clothes or furniture. We must have a better radio set than the family next door. We must stage elaborate social functions for which the Smiths or Browns have set the pace—and so it goes.

It is safe to say that one third of the average family's income is spent for such gratification of vanity, beyond what is necessary to live decently and comfortably.

We work like fury in the hope of finding a way to save labor.

Many folks would enjoy drinking water if there were a law against it.

Usually the fellow who drives fastest isn't going anywhere in particular.

Some men are so easy that they would buy stock in a buggy whip factory.

People who brag about their ancestors are not very enthusiastic over evolution.

He who laughs last may laugh best, but he is probably the dumbell of the party at that.

He's a pretty sorry citizen who can not get credit for more stuff than he can pay for.

After weeding the garden you may get rid of the kink in your back by whitewashing the ceiling.

One consolation is that the uplifters will not enjoy heaven very much with nobody to uplift.

Japanese jurists are studying American jury methods, probably with a view to avoiding such an antiquated system.

The new janitor of the county library threw away a replica of the Venus de Milo because "her arms were busted off."

Nothing will arouse the sympathy of the average male quicker than a pretty woman who admits she is unhappily married.

A new physical test is that of an Ontario firm advertising for a watchman who must fit the uniform it has on hand.

A noted war-time aviator in Belgium has absconded with a lot of money. Still, according to the rules the ace should take the jack.

A chronic grouch complains that he has spent nearly $40 for travel insurance and hasn't been in a single wreck.

Correct this sentence: "He was a shiftless loafer before his marriage, but now is an industrious and thrifty husband."
