ARE YOU AFRAID OF THE DARKNESS?

Are you afraid of the Dark? Well if you are you better not see "The Old Dark House" which plays at the Nyssa Liberty theatre Friday and Saturday. Dark is its middle name. And it has that same Karloff who scared all the little children in "Frankenstein." It was made by James Whale, who directed "Journey's End" and "Frankenstein." "Fear of the dark," says Karloff, who ought to know because he is a very fiend of darkness, "is an inheritance and we all inherit it from our primitive ancestors. We moderns have never been able to completely erase it. The actual menaces of the night in primeval times imbued darkness with a sinister portent which has persisted through the years. Superstitions, witchery, medieval magic—all were supposedly born of darkness, and preferred it for the setting of their dark activities."

APPLE VALLEY CHURCH Sunday School 11 o'clock. M. A. McDonald, superintendent. Church Service 12:15.

THE OTHER FELLOW

Could we but know the other fellow For so many times we don't. We would never call him shallow, Meanness we would do, he won't.

Perhaps He is a man of visions, Far beyond our hampered sight, Perhaps we make some sharp decisions, And condemn the man that's right.

Could we understand his motives Pure perhaps beyond our reach, Do we always learn with gladness All the lessons God would teach?

Do we want to help our brothers, Or is kindness laid on shelves Just to use when it's convenient Or perhaps for dear home folk Could we see as others see us, You and I'd be just a joke.

Let's be lenient when we judge them If we're sure that they've done wrong, Let us help them overcome it They'll repent perhaps 'ere long.

Let us keep our conscience tender Doing that we know is good, Let us try to help the world a little, It may be that we could.

—Mrs. Sarah L. McDonald, Apple Valley.

ROGERS AT HIS BEST IN "DOWN TO EARTH"

After traveling about in various wild portions of the globe, both actually and in his recent screen plays, Will Rogers returns to his native Oklahoma for his latest Fox Films offering, "Down to Earth," which plays Sunday and Monday at the Liberty theatre, Nyssa.

In this highly amusing picture the noted humorist delivers himself of some pungent observations on world-wide conditions that are joyously relished.

The charming Irene Rich reappears as Will's socially ambitious wife, with Dorothy Jordan, Matty Kemp and Mary Carlisle as the juvenile trio who handle the romance of the picture delightfully.

NEW YEAR BRINGS—EXAMS!

We have returned to school after a three weeks vacation and find ourselves entering a new year. All of us have been deluged with good wishes and piled with instructions to work hard and start the New Year right, but we hardly realize the fact that we MUST work hard now, not because it is the beginning of a new year but because the end of the semester is just around the corner.

It seems that no matter how often it occurs we always have to be reminded to study at the end of the six weeks. So, let this be your gentle reminder for this time and kill two birds with one stone—start the New Year right and make a high grade in the coming exams.

TEACHERS RETURN

Mrs. Nettie Medesker and daughter Hettie returned Sunday after their vacation visit. Coach John Young had returned early last week to begin basketball practice. Miss Harriet Ahearn of Milton, Inez Johnson of North Powder, Stella Fishburn of Portland and Margaret Young of Madras, who were away during the holidays, returned on Monday.

BASKET BALL

At assembly Tuesday, Supt. Hollenberg announced the Payette game and also informed the girl fans that they might work in some practice in the near future. He announced an early dismissal for the purpose of cleaning up desks for the New Year.

The Periscope staff regrets the absence of school news in The Journal during the long vacation but plans to have the news in every week until spring.

Groans escaped from all students' lips Tuesday when they learned that next week semester exams will be given. "Here's where we lose some sleep next week."

Several students who were absent because of illness before vacation returned to school Tuesday.

A few sleepy answers and many more "I don't know's" greeted the teachers of every class Tuesday morning. The students evidently needed another week of vacation to recuperate.

Lee Weideman has resumed studies at school and plans to graduate this spring with the 1933 class.

Harriette Truelson visited school Tuesday with her friend Phoebe Wicklander.

Mrs. Warren Blodgett gave a birthday party for her little son Billie last Thursday afternoon.

THE NEW YEAR

He that spared not his own son but delivered Him up for us all, How shall He not with Him freely give us all things. —Rom. 8:23.

Happy New Year to you readers, Happy New Year to you all, Happy New Year in the spring time, In the summer and the fall.

The poor old year has gone, As we think of its failures and losses And we bow our heads in shame Its suicides and crimes

What a black page it leaves for history But we are hoping for better times.

We are turning another clean, white page Shall we blot it up like the last?

I hope we have learned some lessons

In the awful year that has past.

But the morning light is breaking And the night may soon be o'er, For nations now are waking To see God owns the store.

But what about the millions Without a cross or creed But seek alone the present To satisfy their need?

They are looking for a leader Who can supply their bread But they never say a thank you To God by whom they are fed.

It is the God of Heaven, Who turns the Golden key That opens every treasure That comes to you and me.

—Sarah L. McDonald, Apple Valley.

Wishes You All a Happy New Year

Do You Like Meat?

If you use it with chickens, it's good as the dickens,
And it adds to the succulent taste of a steak—
Or with liver and bacon it's bully—no fakins—
And in fritters for frying this fruit takes the cake.

THE fruit to which these lines refer is pineapple. For modern dietitians have discovered a way in which you can eat more meat with less prospect of its disagreeing with you, and this is by combining it with this tropical fruit. It has been found that pineapple contains a substance, a digestive enzyme known as bromelain, that helps materially in the digestion of meats.

Not only that, but chefs and dietitians have gone a step further, and found that pineapple combines wonderfully in taste, as well as advantageously from the dietetic standpoint, with bacon, beef, chicken, ham, lamb, liver, pork, turkey, veal and various other meats. But there's no use telling you this without going on and telling you how to effect some of these tasty and tempting meat combinations. So here goes:

Chicken Combinations

Paradise Island Chicken: Drain a No. 2½ can of sliced Hawaiian pineapple, and brown the slices in butter in a large, heavy skillet. Remove, add the contents of a 4-ounce can of mushrooms (or half a pound of fresh mushrooms), brown and remove. Cut up one 4-pound chicken in pieces for frying, roll in seasoned flour, and brown well in the same fat. Return mushrooms to pan and lay pineapple over the top (it is best to use two skillets, if making the full recipe). Combine the pineapple syrup with the mushroom liquor, and add enough water to make about three and one-half cups. Pour over, add a little salt, cover and cook gently for about one to one and a half hours, or till tender. Arrange chicken and pineapple around a mound of hot buttered noodles, and serve with gravy made by slightly thickening the liquor and mushrooms left in the pan. This serves eight.

Chicken Pie, South Seas: Clean one 4-pound chicken, and cut up in pieces for serving; pour over six cups boiling water and one tablespoon salt, and cook gently until almost tender. Add two cups potato balls or cubes and sixteen small onions, and continue cooking until tender. Remove chicken and vegetables, add four slices of canned Hawaiian pineapple cut in dice (half the contents of a No. 2½ can or use two 8-ounce cans of Hawaiian pineapple tidbits), and arrange in casserole. Smooth together four tablespoons flour and four tablespoons water, add four cups of the chicken stock, season, if necessary, and pour over. Cover top with tiny baking powder biscuits, and bake about thirty minutes, having oven hot at first, then moderate. This, too, serves eight.

Bully With Beef

Grilled Steak Platter: Place a steak large enough for four people on a greased broiler with four large slices of parboiled sweet potatoes, eight large slices of parboiled carrots and eight large slices of parboiled carrots, all three vegetables brushed with butter, and four slices of Hawaiian pineapple dipped in French dressing. Broil, turning when necessary. When half done, add four thick slices tomato sprinkled with chopped green peppers. Lay four slices of bacon on top of sweet potatoes. Finish broiling. Serve on platter with vegetables and pineapple in border around steak.

Beef and Pineapple Fritters: Fry one pound chopped bottom round of beef in a little fat in skillet until brown, working with a fork to keep pieces separate. Add to two well beaten eggs. Add the contents of one 8-ounce can of crushed Hawaiian pineapple (one cup), one tablespoon chopped parsley, and one cup flour, two teaspoons baking powder and one-half teaspoon salt, sifted together. Drop by small spoonfuls into hot fat, 375°, and fry golden brown. Serve with gravy made from drippings in which beef was fried. This makes two dozen small fritters.

With Liver and Bacon

Liver and Bacon with Fruit Garnish: Pour boiling water over two pounds liver, let stand several minutes, drain and remove blood vessels, skin, etc. Dip in seasoned flour and fry in fat until brown and tender. Lay slices of canned Hawaiian pineapple over each slice of liver, and on top put half a banana, cut crosswise, then lengthwise. (This requires one No. 2½ can of pineapple and eight bananas.) Cut eight long slices of bacon in halves, and cross over the top. Place under broiler flame until bacon is crisp and fruits slightly browned. As the bacon cooks faster than the fruit, it is well to let the fruit start to brown before laying on the bacon. Gravy may be made from the drippings. Serves eight.*
