MRS. CONGRESSMAN
PIERCE GUEST IN NYSSA ON FRIDAY

Spending an afternoon with Mrs. Congressman Pierce is like spending an afternoon with a kindly, motherly and charming matron of a little beyond, or near the fifties, who might easily have been your next door neighbor. In spite of the fact that she has reached a high position in the life of Oregon in her own estate, that of state librarian which she retained for many years, she is democratic, friendly and delightfully herself. Without question, she was as much at home in a country cottage as she will be in the capitol city.

"I love meeting people," said Mrs. Pierce, "and I will carry a warm spot in my heart for Nyssa so kind and hospitable have your people been."

One might say Mrs. Pierce will make the ideal, if not the average wife for Congressman Pierce when he goes to Washington to serve the state of Oregon and the nation. It takes but a short while to know that Mrs. Pierce thinks far more of the real work behind the approaching sojourn in the capitol city than of the colorful social life which perhaps would appeal more strongly to women less intrigued with the economic problems which so seriously confront the incoming administration.

Mrs. Congressman Pierce hails it all with the joy of welcoming a new adventure. She will be a secretary-wife, like Mrs. Garner, wife of the vice-president-elect. She will work with Congressman Pierce through the interesting, if arduous, days of their crowning achievement in a long life of activity in politics and public life.

A wonderful pair are Congressman and Mrs. Pierce, a tolerant, cultured and friendly couple of advanced years. They are youthful in strength and courage. Both are entertaining speakers. Both are students, as well as teachers, and they frequently discuss an interesting passage from some book they have perused together at their old-fashioned ranch home near La Grande.

Speaking of their home, Mr. Pierce says it has fourteen rooms and "Cornelia" has furnished everyone of them. So, after all, she is a delightful combination of housewife and stateswoman. Our good wishes will follow our honored congressional couple on their first trip to Washington.

COOKS HERE FROM SEATTLE

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Cook came from Seattle last week, the former to inspect work on the Central Oregon highway near Juniper which is under way by the General Construction company. While in the county, Mr. and Mrs. Cook were entertained at Nyssa and Ontario homes. Last Monday night the Cooks and Mr. and Mrs. Dick Adams were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Hale. They were overnight guests at the Adams home. Tuesday evening they were guests at a bridge dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Banks in Ontario. Early Wednesday they left by motor for their home in Seattle.

ODDFELLOWS WILL ENTERTAIN

Oddfellows are inviting the Rebekahs and their wives to a party at their hall in the Wilson Building next Tuesday night, February 7, but instead of a password each guest must bring a sealed package for an auction in order to gain admission. Proceeds will be used as a retirement fund "for Republicans," said J. R. Hunter, noble grand. He says there will be lots of eats and fun.

MONDAY BRIDGE CLUB

Mrs. Dick Adams entertained members of Monday bridge club with a lovely bridge luncheon this week. Prize winners were Mrs. Ray Emmott and Mrs. Eddie Powell. Among the guests was Mrs. C. S. Hale, whose husband has been notified of an early transfer to Boulder Dam. The Hales have lived at Owyhee Dam and Nyssa the past few years.
