SPRING

A new year is beginning! Perhaps not the calendar year but nevertheless a new year. The time when everything takes a new lease on life. The grasses spring up over night; the trees bud out; little lambs frolic from morn 'til night and fuzzy baby chicks peep and chirp as they hunt for bits of food.

Everything seems new and clean and unconsciously we throw back our heads and prepare for another year of this life which now seems so worth while.—Bertha Williams.

Easter is not far off and what symbolizes a new awakening better than Easter? The day itself is a celebration of Christ's resurrection but to those to whom that means little it is still a beginning—over. Even the new wardrobe that appear as if by magic on Easter morning adorn every one and show that in every respect we are starting life again.

The first warm days make everyone want to get out in the sun. Some to dig in the soil, planting vegetables and flowers which represent another form of new life. The boy goes fishing, not so much to catch fish but to enable him to drink in the sun and fresh air which has such a delicious odor. Some boys, (and even girls) feel the urge to get out into this new world so strongly that they play "hockey" from school, taking the consequences rather than spend the day indoors.

Members of the main cast in the Operetta "Sonia" entertained the large crowd at the declamatory contest Friday with a few selections. They advertised the operetta at the Big Bend grange meeting at the Wade school-house Tuesday night.

Miss Clarice Johnson, who is to direct the student body play, "Peg O' my Heart" has partially selected the cast. The play will be given soon after the operetta. It is a comedy of three acts written by J. H. Manners.

The advanced algebra and health education classes took their classes in the open air Tuesday to mark off the ball diamond. The health ed class then tested their heart reaction to determine eligibility for school athletics. They first took their pulse beats, ran around the diamond, took pulse beats again, then determined whether their again, rested three minutes, took pulse hearts were normal or not.

Seniors are again finding out how
