

Only Three Measures Will Be Voted On At November Election

Salem—Only three measures will confront the voters of Oregon when they go to the polls next November. One of these—the Grange Power bill enacted by the 1933 legislature—will be on the ballot by reason of the referendum invoked by the Security Owners Association. The other two are initiated measures. Of these latter the proposed Tax Limitation amendment is sponsored by the Tax Limitation League of Oregon and the proposed Healing Arts amendment is sponsored by the Progressive Constitutional Amendment committee.

The Grange Power bill provides for state development of water power and hydro electric energy either separately or in conjunction with the federal government or some other state or states, and the transmission, distribution and sale of power at cost. The measure also provides for the creation of a state power commission of three members. Bonds to finance operations of the commission and development of a state power program could be issued only after approval by the voters.

The Tax Limitation measure seeks to limit the ad valorem tax on property in Oregon for current governmental expenses to a maximum of 20 mills effective in 1936, with a reduction of one mill each year for five years so that after 1940 the maximum property tax—except for debt service—would be 15 mills. Of this tax not more than 10 per cent could be applied to state purposes, not more than 25 per cent to county purposes and not more than 40 per cent to city and town purposes. Tax levies for existing indebtedness would not be included in this constitutional limit and a higher tax could be levied for current expenses in any year upon approval of two-thirds of the voters. The measure would also limit assessment on property to 50 per cent of its cash value.

The proposed Healing Arts constitutional amendment would abolish preliminary examinations of applicants for licenses to practice certain branches of the healing arts as now provided by statute and vests exclusive authority in respective licensing boards of the medical and osteopathic, chiropractic and naturopathic schools to determine the nature and scope of examinations for such applicants.

The November ballot will be one of the shortest in the 32 years experience of this state with the initiative and referendum. In the general election of 1904 there were only three measures on the ballot and at a special election on November 6, 1923, only one measure, the income tax act, was presented to the voters.
