Oregon Wheat Growers Get More AAA Benefits

An increase of four cents a bushel on wheat allotment benefit payments for the 1935 crop has been announced by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, although the processing tax on wheat has been continued at the former figure of 30 cents a bushel.

The additional adjustment payments to farmers are made possible through reserves accumulated from the tax on wheat production by farmers not under allotment contracts, according to an explanation received by the Oregon State college extension service. The increased payment will not result in any deficit in the wheat budget since available funds are ample to cover the increase, the Washington announcement stated.

The increase in payments will mean more than $370,000 additional to cooperating growers in Oregon. The entire benefit payment for 1935 for Oregon growers will amount to approximately $3,082,000, it is estimated.

Compliance forms for Oregon are being filled out rapidly and are being forwarded to Washington as soon as completed. Work of auditing the compliance reports started the second week in July, according to Washington officials, and will be followed shortly by actual disbursement of checks covering the final payment for 1934 and the first payment for 1935.

The first 1935 payment will again be 20 cents a bushel on the allotments, while the final payment, under the present three-year contract, will be at least 13 cents a bushel, less the necessary deduction for local cost. Oregon extension men say the deduction this year will be somewhat less than last, when the average for the state was 1.3 cents a bushel on allotments.

The change in benefit payments for 1935 has nothing whatever to do with the pending new contracts, to be available sometime this summer, the Washington officials emphasize. Farmers from many parts of the country, who were in conference with the AAA officials recently, made a number of suggestions for inclusion in these new contracts.

It is possible that arrangements will be made in the new program for making the entire year's payment at one time. However, a proposal was tentatively approved to retain a second payment and make it somewhat flexible in amount according to changes in the market price of wheat during the crop year. The growers also strongly advocated giving county committees more discretion in making local adjustments as to base acreage and other details.
