FUN FROM GOOD BOOKS

Why not read good books in such a way as to get fun and enjoyment out of them instead of making it a task to read a book?

This then you will find to be true: If you want to amount to something, do something in the world that will help yourself and others, one good way is to take your fun, your pastime, seriously enough to get out of them all that there is in them.

And all this is true with your reading; which means take reading seriously. What does this mean? Read books that are dull and stupid? Hardly, any more than your taking swimming seriously means doing something dull and stupid. Swimming is to give you a pleasure, and you always do your best to learn by practice the best way to swim. It may be that the first time it is a bit difficult, but how is one to amount to anything unless one develops the ability to conquer?

So it is in reading. We cannot get the real joy out of books by just ect one which you would like. Some of you may say "aw, there are no good books in there"; but if you were to read seriously the few books that make up this little school library, you could increase your vocabulary, reading "any old thing" any more than we get joy out of swimming, just as there is a best method in reading. The best method in reading is to look over the suggested list of books in our school library and select and knowledge to a great extent.

There are several types of books, all of which can be found in our little library. These types range from the "easy to read" types, up to the great classics, which every age has read and called great; and you will not miss their greatness and power. What a triumph to develop the ability to read such books and be able to enjoy them. Remember—"For Fun, Read Good Books."
