LABOR PROBLEMS
VITAL TO OUR
OREGON SHIPPERS

Ontario, May 14—It is only in recent years that the labor movement in Oregon has fallen into ill repute, according to W. H. Perkins, manager of the Oregon Producers and Shippers Association, in an extended report to the officers and members of that organization.

"During the many years that Otto Hartwig was the titular and active head of the labor movement in this state serious difficulties were few and far between," he reported. "During those years organized labor was fighting for recognition. But it was fighting honestly and fairly."

Otto Hartwig and his associates were able to write into the statutes of this state numerous laws of real benefit to the laboring man, and of sound worth to the state as a whole.

"But in more recent years labor leadership in Oregon has undergone a radical change. We now find organized labor in its many ramifications firmly entrenched at each biennial legislative lobby. Through coercion, intimidation and other methods they have been able during recent years to build up a certain legislative following among our law-makers, who do their bidding, regardless of the cost to the state and its people.

"Our statutes today are honey-combed with special privilege laws on behalf of organized labor which never could have been enacted were it not for the political cowardice of former legislators.

"In Oregon today a labor organization can cause the financial ruin of any business enterprise through strikes and picketing, and yet, the business enterprise thus ruined has no recourse in the courts of this state. A labor organization can break written contracts and agreements at will, yet there is absolutely nothing the employer can do about it. If, however, the employer should break a contract with labor, the financial and legal responsibility of the employer is amenable to countless restrictive laws.

"It is the firm conviction of the membership of this organization, and numerous other representative grower groups in every part of the state that the responsibility of labor organizations should be fixed by statute. They should be required to incorporate under the laws of Oregon, and their officers and members should be held accountable at law for the acts of their organizations.

"The members of this and similar organizations are convinced that if such responsibility of labor leadership is established it will be the finest thing that ever happened to the labor movement in Oregon. Such restrictive laws unquestionably would prove the downfall of the present irresponsible labor leadership but it would prove to be the salvation of the laboring man, who today is at best but a pawn in the nimble fingers of the low-mouthed business agent who waxes fat and arrogant on discord and violence."

I. O. N. GRANGE GIVES REPORT OF THEIR
MANY ACTIVITIES

By Jane Ditton

The I. O. N. Grange at Sheaville, Oregon during the past three meetings has engaged in various activities. At one meeting the ladies were entertained during Lecturer's hour by a program in charge of the men. After which they served a bachelor lunch.

May 1 an open meeting was held in honor of Mother's Day. The Lecturer furnished a very appropriate program. Carnations were given to all the mothers; two beautiful narcissus plants were given to the oldest Grange Mother and the oldest Mother in the community.

A large crowd was present at the dance April 25, which was sponsored by the grange with HEC in charge of supper. The proceeds will be used for payment on the piano. Another dance is planned for May 23rd.

Two prizes were awarded Miss
