Just what did the maritime strike accomplish for labor? This is a question that will keep labor leaders busy explaining for some time. Everyone knows that it cost the Pacific coast many millions of dollars. At the end of the strike Harry Bridges, the alien leader of the longshoremen's group announced that the strike would be over because it was impossible to keep the men from returning to work. In other words Bridges would have liked to prolong the strike but couldn't keep hungry and penniless men from working. And they returned to work the longshoremen, at the identical wages they received before the strike.

Oregon appears due to enact legislation controlling unions and fixing union responsibility. If this comes to pass union leaders can put the blame squarely where it belongs. On the maritime strike. Without it such legislation would have been impossible.

One bill now before the legislature would repeal the dog and horse racing bill which has provided large sums for the state fair, livestock show, Pendleton Roundup and the county fairs. Most interested in the success of this repeal move are the big-shot gamblers who operate Portland's police-protected gaming dens. The dog races cut into their illegal operations heavily.

There has been some talk about slot machine men wanting a state license law. The real truth is that a license law would wreck their business. One slot machine operator was approached by a would-be lobbyist who offered, for $5000, to get a bill passed legalizing the machines.

"Legalize them and I'll be out of business," said the operator. "Every little merchant will buy his own pay license and where will I be. I'll tell you what I will do, I'll pay $5000 for a bill making it a felony to own one"

The people of the state of Oregon will be slow to legalize gambling of all kinds. It is an ugly thought. But they may be forced to it one of these days to protect themselves from the graft and corruption. The condition closely parallels the prohibition problem.

Three measures dumped in the house hopper dealing with "prepaid medicine" are designed primarily for the benefit of the wage earner who can afford to pay a small fee out of his monthly income for medical and surgical care and hospitalization if needed. The bills have been introduced through the hospital association sources. The hospital associations, comparatively young as an industry, have operated over a period of 20 years without much in the way of control laws. During the last year they did a $1,500,000 business and the wiser leaders have seen the need of strict legislation to offset "rackets." Similar measures have been offered in the Washington legislature at Olympia.

SUPER-SHELL

JUST "starting up" after a normal traffic stop can waste enough gasoline to drive your car a third of a mile.

To reduce the waste of stop and go, Shell engineers developed a way to "balance" gasoline. This balancing process completely rearranges the chemical structure of gasoline . . . makes Super-Shell

"digestible" for your motor . . . just as cooking will make some foods digestible for you. "Motor-digestible" is the best way to describe this gasoline. Under all stop-and-go driving conditions, you'll find your motor gets the full benefit of Super-Shell's high energy content. And you get the savings! Super-Shell is on sale from coast to coast. There's a Shell station in your neighborhood.
