ADMINISTRATION FORCES BACK BIG FOREIGN SUGAR QUOTAS—

NYSSA is pretty vitally interested in the sugar bill argument now being staged in Congress and which threatens to thwart the plans of leaders to adjourn congress this month. The center of the whole argument is how much refined sugar the producers in Hawaii and Puerto Rico be allowed to ship to the American market.

This is where Nyssa and the entire Snake river valley is very much interested. If the administration officials have their way, and allow large shipments from these two sugar producing countries, it might be dangerous to Amalgamated's plans for a sugar mill. In fact it might blow the whole thing sky high.

On the other hand, congressman from sugar-producing areas are fighting to limit imports and the Jones bill, drawn as a compromise but still unacceptable to executive departments, would limit Hawaii to 290,616 tons and Puerto Rico to 126,000 tons. The remainder of their quotas would have to be raw sugar. Administration officials insisted that Hawaii and Puerto Rico be permitted to ship quotas of 938,000 and 798,000 short tons, respectively.

The fight is being watched with great interest by western beet interests, farmers and business men as the future of the beet sugar industry hinges to a large degree upon the successful passage of this measure. Large quotas from these countries would put the American beet farmer in direct competition with cheap native labor of these two U. S. possessions, and financed by the big money boys of New York and other financial centers. Dumping all this refined sugar onto the American market would likely have the effect of putting a damper on expansion plans of beet sugar manufacturing concerns.

No wonder Nyssa is hoping the congressional sugar bloc will win over the administration forces! There is nothing sweet about the battle in Washington, and there'll be nothing sweet said around here if our American beet farmers have hundreds of thousands of tons of sugar dumped into their market. About the only thing we can do is hope the matter will be settled soon, the bill passed; and in meantime make a note as to how each congressman votes on the matter . . . just for future reference.

PRINT THE STORY

When the town's prodigal son jumps over the traces or a prominent village official commits suicide, you're usually faced with a problem. Suppress the facts or print the story? Either course is difficult . . . You feel like a liar when you don't tell the truth and you feel like Simon Legree if you do.

We only express an opinion—one which may be opposed by many—but we say: Print the facts. Immediate reactions may be highly unfavorable, yet we've found that today's complaining soul is often the very person who will criticize you for suppressing a similar story a few weeks hence.

Gossiping tongues—always malicious in such cases—usually spread a far more scandalous lie unless a black-and-white recording of the true facts is made through the newspaper. Instead of insulting the bereaved, your paper—by printing the story—is actually helping them check unfounded and baseless lies which might otherwise give much more anguish.

By omitting the story you are certainly not keeping John Jones' suicide a secret. Such a sensational event has already been recorded by the grapevine method long before your paper reaches the mailbox. What, then, is the extra stigma that a printed word can add to this already common knowledge? Possibly the bereaved hesitates to have their kinsman's demise recorded for future readers. But would they not rather have the TRUTH recorded than to have the story grow from tongue to tongue, like a grossly exaggerated folk legend of the Middle Ages.—Publishers' Auxiliary.

LOWER BIG BEND MISS FLORENCE RUSSELL

Ray Cartwright has been suffering of heart trouble the past two weeks. Mrs. Howard Hatch was rushed to the hospital for an emergency operation last Tuesday. She is improving. One of the Oip boys is in a Nampa hospital in a serious condition. Mrs. Chas. Witty is under the doctors' care. It is hoped all our neighbors will soon be well again.
