"Oil Does Not Wear Out Mechanically"

For many years the motoring public has been educated to believe that oil wears out and therefore has no further lubricating value.

This theory has been exploded by the U. S. Bureau of Standards who state: "OIL DOES NOT WEAR OUT MECHANICALLY. It may be used over and over again after reclaiming."

OILPURE REFINERS are made in two models, one for passenger cars, and one for trucks and tractors.

OILPURE REFINERS are universal in construction and installation, and may be transferred from one motor to another.

Installation does not require any change in the oiling system.

An OUTSTANDING Beet Puller

SUCCESSFUL sugar beet growers know that the profits from the crop depend largely on the method of harvesting. The important thing is to loosen all of the beets, with damage to as few roots as possible.

The John Deere lifting blades, are designed to get all of the beets, large and small, with the least amount of damage. The blades work along the row, breaking the soil and lifting the beets several inches, leaving the beets upright in the most convenient position for handling. The beets are not exposed to sun and frost.

The No. 23 will handle beets in rows from 18 inches to 28 inches apart. It is regularly furnished with 14-inch rolling coulters
