ROOSEVELT URGES FIRM PROSPERITY

WASHINGTON (AP)—Federal officials who wield potent powers over the stock market heard from President Roosevelt Wednesday that the government must perfect and co-ordinate its mechanisms for building a firm prosperity, free from violent swings into booms and depressions.

The President delivered a brief address at dedicatory ceremonies for the new federal reserve building. Top-ranking financial officials, legislators and private bankers were among the audience.

The stock market, which regained Wednesday some of the ground lost in recent steep plunges, drew no direct mention from Mr. Roosevelt. Neither did he refer to assertions by some business leaders that government policies were responsible for the market downturns.

Must Be Perfected
The nation's monetary and credit machinery, the President said, "must be steadily perfected and co-ordinated with all other instruments of government to promote the most productive utilization of our human and material resources."

"Only in that way," he continued, "can we hope to achieve and maintain an enduring prosperity, free from the disastrous extremes of booms and depressions."

"Only in that way can our economic system and our democratic institutions endure, hand in hand."

At another point, the executive said banking powers have been concentrated in the federal reserve board "so that they can be used promptly and effectively in accordance with the changing needs of the country."

Then, speaking slowly and emphasizing each word, he added: "Nineteen thirty-seven is not nineteen thirten; nor do we want to turn the hands of the clock back."
