Bus Safety Award Winner Says "Drive as if Other Guy Crazy"

In 21 years of bus driving, covering 1,850,000 miles, Interstate Driver Haselwood never has had an accident.

Slogan Helps Veteran to Near 2,000,000-Mile No-Accident Mark

His own traffic safety slogan, "Drive like the other guy was crazy", supplementing his company's manual of safe driving rules, is the reason that Ernest R. "Pop" Haselwood has won the "Nation's Safest Bus Driver" award, he declares.

In 21 years of bus driving, the last eight of which have been with the Interstate Transit-Union Pacific Stages lines, which operates through this territory, Haselwood has covered more than 1,850,000 miles without causing the slightest accident.

He began his unusual career on his own one-man bus line in the Pacific Northwest in 1916.

The magazine, Bus Transportation, sponsored the contest, and awarded Haselwood a 17-jewel watch.

His work has won national recognition even before this contest, and his driving practices considered a model.

Haselwood's customary run is from Cheyenne, Wyo., where he lives, to North Platte, Nebr., a distance of 219 miles. Forty-four years old, he intends to continue driving buses for a long time, and he is certain he can maintain his non-accident record by application of the principle he coined, "Drive like the other guy was crazy".

Say to your merchant, "I saw your ad in The Journal." Buy from advertisers, it pays!

... has been effective is shown clearly by the fact that the national tuberculosis death rate has been reduced from 179 deaths per 100,000 in 1907 to 54 in 1936 and in the state of Oregon the rate per 100,000 has been reduced to 40.

This year we again feature the seal sale because we believe its purpose is an important activity in the state. Every cent of the money collected from the sale by the Oregon Tuberculosis association, with the exception of the small amount which goes for campaigns is spent in an effort to control a disease which threatens every man, woman and child in Oregon. The disease is still a common cause of death among young people, particularly girls and young women. It is still taking fathers and mothers away from their children and making families dependent.

This is a disease which is now thoroughly understood but is still with us for the simple reason that funds are not available for an adequate control program. The sale of Christmas seals makes it possible for you to participate in the fight against tuberculosis. Everyone interested in health should join in this thoroughly life-saving program. An adequate program provides for the routine testing of all children and exposed persons. It provides educational activities showing people how to prevent and care for the disease. Everything is done to provide facilities for the accurate diagnosis of this disease in its earliest stages.
