THE FARM BILL—

WITH the recent passing of the Farm Bill, we may all benefit by analyzing some of the high points of that legislation. In the form of question and answers, we hope the following will give our reader those high points.

Most farmers and business men want to know what the purpose of the bill is. The primary purpose of the bill is to restrict the production of the four major crops of the United States—wheat, corn, tobacco and rice. The restriction to go only so far as to insure the farmer a return on his crop equal to at least the production cost plus a reasonable profit.

Another question that we have been asked frequently is "Will this bill be in effect for the crop year of 1938?" The answer is, yes, the bill will be in effect this year on all crops except that of rice.

On the amounts that can be grown by the farmer, the secretary of agriculture estimates the total amount of each crop that will not only be consumed in our domestic markets, but also that, that will find its way into foreign markets. After these estimates have been made as to commodities, it is then determined how many acres will be needed to produce that amount. This acreage is then divided among the different states on a basis of past production. This state allocation is then further broken down so that each individual farmer is given his quota for the year.

One feature of the bill will protect the farmer in the price of his commodity in that he can borrow money on his crop, if he wants to hold for better prices. His crop may also be insured, against all hazards, even including rust. As we understand the bill, this insurance clause applies to wheat only.

The quota for each farmer is established every year before the farmer starts his crop to market. Each farmer must abide by this quota, or, as in the case of a wheat farmer, suffer a fifteen cent penalty on each bushel of wheat sold in excess of his quota.

If a farmer does not sign up under the farm bill, he is not eligible for the benefits, but is subject to all the penalties provided a quota has been established for that crop.

'Parity prices' are not considered in the bill that now awaits the signature of the President. Although the bill in its original form did contemplate such a benefit. The shortage of funds, at the present time, makes this feature impossible. Sponsors of the bill hope, as finances permit, to put the act under the parity system as additional funds for the purpose become available.

A FRIEND PASSES—

TUESDAY, of this week, marked the passing of a friend of all who are, or have lived in Nyssa.

Mrs. Marshall came to Nyssa in 1908. Four years later, she took over the job of librarian. And through her hard work and interest, the first five years of which she served without remuneration, she developed a library for all of us, all through this time first being in one building and then another. Some times in a building that was either not heated at all or one poorly so—and never a word of complaint, but always the thought that through her work others might enjoy the facilities of a library.

Which brings us to the question "What makes a man or woman great?" Surely it is not the education a person may have. Nor the position, or station in life. And likewise not the money that may be accumulated.

What makes a man or woman great? Surely we can find the answer to that question in the words of Jesus Christ, "Whosoever will be great among you, let him be your servant."

Truly no one could have better filled this requirement than our dearly beloved pioneer and friend, Mrs. Fred Marshall.

Our present library stands as a monument to her untiring effort and work, all done in the spirit of serving the people and community in which she lived.

FREEDOM

Written for The Christian Science Monitor

In an issue of The Christian Science Monitor there appeared an interesting news item with regard to the seventy-fifth anniversary of Abraham Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation. The article related that the magnanimous work of the President, which was destined to bring about the freeing of the African slave in the United States, met with frequent opposition. One night, we are told, the President did not retire but remained in close communion with God, reading many of his favorite passages from the Bible.

The following morning, in reply to a question as to whether or not he would sign the Emancipation Proclamation, he said, "I am a man under orders. I cannot do otherwise." This intrepid declaration of what he understood to be the correct solution to the problem, served as a most effective rebuke to evil. The renowned statesman realized that he was being divinely directed, and he had the courage to stand by his conviction.

About the same period another distinguished emancipator, namely, Mary Baker Eddy, was engaged in unselfish efforts to give to men a clearer understanding of their God-bestowed freedom. The elucidation of her discovery is now available in her book, entitled "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures." Those who earnestly ponder the truths contained in this precious volume will find certain release from fleshly ills.

"Legally to abolish unpaid servitude in the United States was hard; but the abolition of mental slavery is a more difficult task," Mrs. Eddy writes on page 225 of the Christian Science textbook. And she further states on the same page that "men and women of all climes and races are still in bondage to material sense, ignorant how to obtain their freedom."

Christian Scientists throughout the world are daily proving, in an ever-increasing measure, their exemption from mental slavery to material sense. They are demonstrating beyond cavil that it is not a part of God's plan for mankind to be in bondage to evil in any guise. It matters not whether the tempter comes in the form of sin, sickness, lack, or any of the limitations of the so-called carnal mind; if we are trusting in God, as the only Life, thus exemplifying man's immunity from evil.

SLOWING RECOVERY

Washington, for several weeks past now, has been the scene of almost daily conferences designed to bring about better co-operation between government and business as a means toward lifting the Nation from a recession bog. From all indications, the talks have served to bring about a better understanding, if nothing else.

Almost to a man, every business leader invited to the Capital City to express his views on the economic problems has urged that the tax burden on business be lightened as one of the most certain means of relieving the recovery march, and that the competition of government in business with its own citizens should be curbed.

These business men know—as the government should know now that money paid in taxes cannot be spent for wages; that the same dollar can't go into the tax till and the pay envelope at the same time. This philosophy isn't something new to be heard around Washington—Congress had the same idea last December when it was in special session.

Everyone seems to be in accord on the matter—that stifling taxation must be ended; that tax money, if unleashed in the business field, will go a long way toward providing jobs for unemployed workers. Why then, should this important step toward industrial recovery?—Parma Review.

BOY SCOUT WEEK

This week, February 6 to 13 is national Boy Scout Week. You have seen the Boy Scouts of Baker on the streets in their uniforms, and perhaps have wondered why. The answer—it's Boy Scout Week. As a character building organization the Boy Scouts recognize no creed, race, or color as superior, and at the world jamborees even the Chinese Scout and the Japanese Scout recognize each other as brothers. In Baker and throughout Eastern Oregon recent years have witnessed a rapid growth of the country taking part in the work.

In Baker there were for a number of years three active troops. These have carried on and now there are six troops with a cub pack just organized.

More power to the scouts, may their organization grow and prosper with an ever increasing number of members; may they never lose sight of the character building purpose, for above all the building of noble character of service to mankind and guide the progress of mankind in the years to come is the need of the future.—Eastern Oregon News.

UNBELIEVABLE LAWLESSNESS

The revelations of the extent of lawlessness on the part of union gangsters in Portland by recent arrests and reported confessions is no less than staggering. That we, in this century and in a supposedly civilized and government regulated country should be subjected to such ruthless and savage methods of intimidation and brutality is appalling.

It is time for the people to become aroused and demand from all governing officials drastic action. If we need more laws, drastic ones, it is time they were enacted. If there is no other way to handle the situation, if governments and laws are powerless to control the gangsters, it is time for the organization of armed vigilantes as in the frontier days.

There is no sense in talking pious, gooey-gooey talk to such toughnecks as have been operating in Portland. They understand but one thing and that is force backed up with clubs and guns.

Such things as building of property, dynamiting of buildings, beating up and injuring individuals on the streets or in their homes or places of business are in defiance of all laws. They cannot and must not be tolerated. The liberty and safety of everyone is jeopardized by permitting such things. They must be stopped as we stopped the kidnapping racket and the big city racket of organized gangs. If necessary we must demand penalties more severe than we have even to the death penalty, the firing squad. This is one place where government ought to function and function drastically.

The whole labor mess in the United States, and it is a mess, which is going to spoil things for the laborers as well as everyone else if it is allowed to run on, is to be laid directly on the White House steps. Mr. President could have at any time in recent months and could now straighten things out in short order if he would. But he and his associates must play politics. They are afraid of losing the votes of laborers throughout the nation. They will sacrifice the safety and welfare of millions of decent, law abiding citizens for the sake of remaining in Power.

We are not to believe that all unions and union men are guilty of or believe in such things as have been happening in Portland. Most of them do not. Most union men are like the rest of us, law-abiding and law-supporting. It is the roughnecks a cover for their lawlessness. The racketeers who use the union as a tool to this dangerous and false leadership and give them the boot the better off the labor cause in the United States will be.—Condon Globe Times.
