NATIONAL GUARD CAMP DATE

SALEM, Ore.—The annual maneuvers of the Oregon National Guard at Camp Clatsop June 14 to 28 will bring about the largest concentration of troops in th history of this state. More than 3600 officers and men will assemble for the 15 days of intensive training, according to Major General George A. White.

Guard units from Portland, Astoria, Tillamook, St. Helens, Milwaukie, Newberg and Gresham will move to the camp by motor convoy, requiring 107 trucks, 24 station wagons and three ambulances. Five troop trains consisting of 23 tourists sleepers, 24 coaches and 18 baggage cars will be required to carry the more distanct units.

Camp Clatsop, rated as the finest military training cantonment in the United States, has been greatly improved since the Oregon troops last asembled there in 1936, General White points out. New roads have been built, old roads improved, a new natatorium and recreation building has been completed, additional tent frames and floors installed, bath houses, mess halls and kitchens provided to accommodate the increased strength of the guard and extensive landscaping added materially to the attractiveness of the camp.

A camp supply team of ten men from the state detachment will go to Camp Clatsop June 6 to prepare for the issuance of food and other supplies. They will be accompanied by Lieutenant Colonel Raymond F. Olson, quartermaster; Major Leo J. A. Pironi, Captain George Bates and Lieutenant W. H. Adams.

FOR BETTER EXHIBIT AT WOLRD'S FAIR

Legislative approval will have to be had before the Oregon World's Fair commission can transfer the $20,000 appropriated for the New York fair to the San Francisco fair. When the Oregon commission decided to withdraw from the New York fair because it could not have the site first allotted to this state it was announced that the two appropriations would be consolidated and spent on this state's display at San Francisco. Attorney General Van Winkle this week ruled that this could not be done by the commisssion since the funds were appropriated for specific purposes.

CAPITOL BUILDING READY JULY 1

Oregon's new $2,500,000 capitol building, now nearing completion, will be ready for occupancy by July 1 but formal dedication of the building will probably be postponed until next January when the legislature is in session, it was decided by the capitol commission here this week. Carpets are now being laid in the legislative chambers and finishing touches being rushed on the interior of the building. Rugs, drapes and furniture for the house and senate and the executive suite will not be ready for several months. The contractor expects to be off the job by the middle of this month and the work of moving into the new building will get under way as soon thereafter as the janitors can make the building habitable.

STATE FAIR BUILDING

Work on the new $17,000 administration building at the state fair grounds is well under way and the first unit will be ready for occupancy before this year's fair opens on Labor day. This unit, in addition to the administrative offices will also provide quarters for the press, telephone and telegraph offices, a first aid station and a radio broadcashing booth.

VETERAN'S LOANS TO CLOSE

Veterans of the Spanish-American and World Wars have a little less than a month left in which to take advantage of the loan provision of the Oregon soldiers' bonus law.
